REPUBLICAN STATE MANAGER PICKED AS FINANCE DIRECTOR

Education Director Only
Hold-Over In Ohio
Cabinet

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 9.—Harry D. Silver, Republican state campaign manager, will be finance director in governor-elect Myers Y. Cooper's cabinet, according to semi-official reports here today.

As finance director Silver would be Cooper's chief advisor, or second only to the governor himself in the administration of state affairs.

Silver, it was said, would occupy the same position Senator Cyrus Locher held in Gov. Vic Donahey's cabinet—known politically as the "premier" of the administration.

Cooper is expected to announce the membership of his cabinet here long. Other positions to be filled are those of directors of commerce, agriculture, highways, health, welfare, industrial relations, and public works.

State Director of Education John L. Clifton is the only cabinet member who will hold over. Although Clifton is a Democrat his office is a constitutional one, with a definite term. Other cabinet members will retire with Governor Donahey on January 14.

Among other important appointments Cooper will make are the following:

Adjutant general, prohibition commissioner, two members of the public utilities commission, superintendent of banks, state securities commissioner, one member of the industrial commission, superintendent of building and loan associations, state fire marshal, one member of the tax commission and one member of the civil service commission.

In addition to these, the governor-elect must fill a host of subordinate jobs which technically are at the disposal of cabinet members and department heads, but which actually are filled by appointees named by the governor.

Silver first broke into politics as a member of the general assembly from Preble County in 1919.

ELEVEN DEMOCRATS IN NEXT ASSEMBLY

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 9.—There will be only eleven Democrats among the entire 164 members of the eighty-eighth general assembly when that body convenes next Jan. 7.

All thirty-one members of the new state senate will be Republicans. In the house there will be 122 Republicans and eleven Democrats.

These are the figures announced by Thomas E. Bateman, clerk of the senate, who was chairman of the Republican legislative campaign bureau during the recent campaign.

The only counties which elected Democrats to the house were: Ashland, Mercer, Monroe, Ottawa, Pickaway, Pike, Putnam, Richland, Sandusky, Coshocton and Fairfield.

Twenty counties which two years ago elected Democratic representatives elected Republican members this year.

DEMOCRATIC PARTY NOT DEAD SAYS VIC

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 9.—Answering a questionnaire from The New York World as to the probable future of the Democratic party, Governor Vic Donahey today said:

"The Democratic party has been defeated but is not dead. Our defeats and we should forget our differences making it our duty to see that the Republican party shall in good conscience carry out to the letter its promises to the people who made its success possible. Forward march."

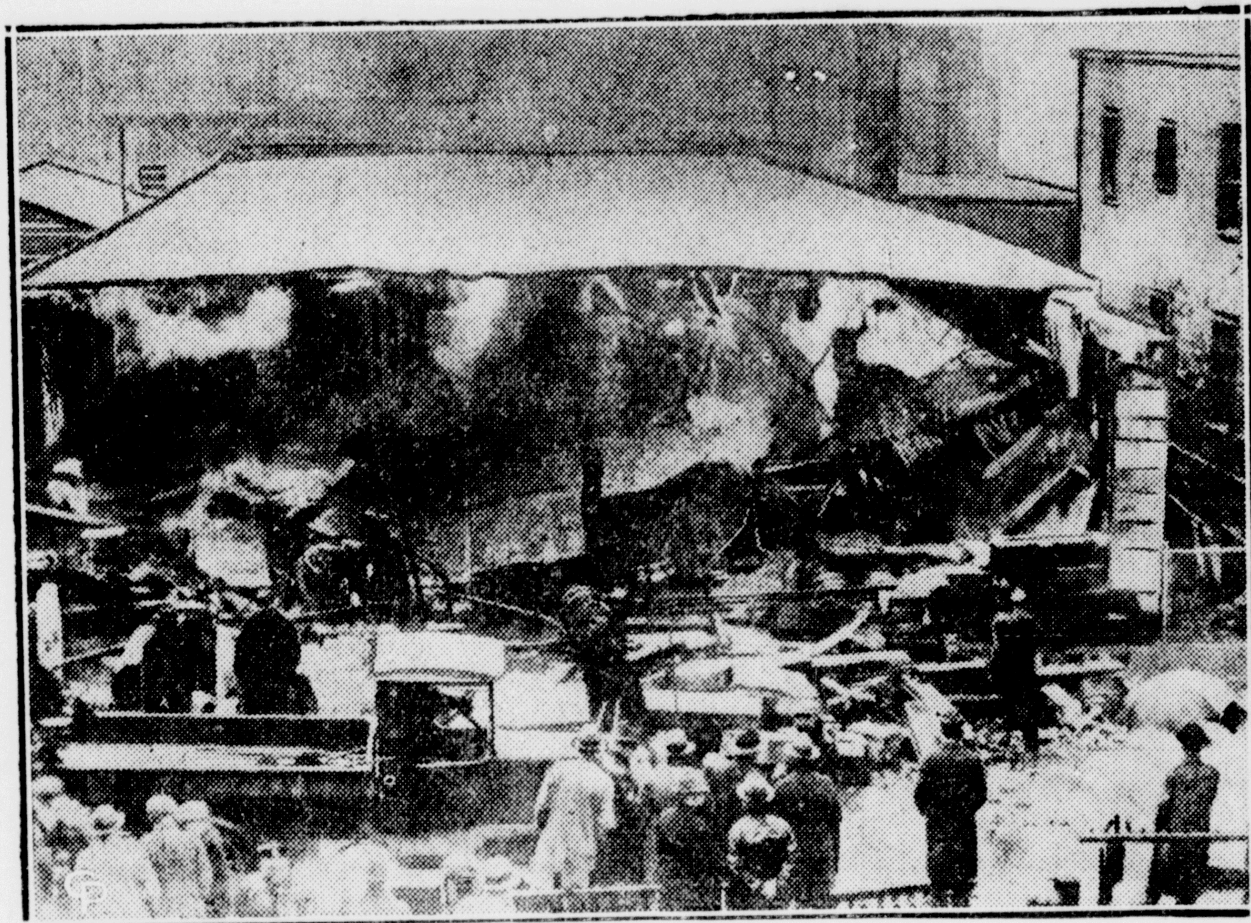

POINCARE ASKED TO FORM NEW CABINET

PARIS, Nov. 9.—President Gaston Doumergue summoned Raymond Poincare at 3 p. m. today and formally called on him to form a cabinet to replace the one which resigned Monday.

Poincare remained with the president to discuss the possibilities of re-constituting his cabinet of the national union against radical socialist opposition. He promised to give his answer tonight.

ETNA SPREADS DISASTER

WHERE EIGHTEEN MET DEATH IN EXPLOSION

The house at the extreme right in the photo is where three of the children perished when flames from the factory enveloped the dwelling.

WOMAN ARRESTED FOR MURDER; DETECTIVE UNRAVELS MYSTERY

OTTAWA, O., Nov. 9.—Mrs. Sylvia Conner, 32, of Gilboa, was to be arraigned today before Justice of the Peace J. J. Benning here, charged with the murder of Mrs. Mary Helmer, 19 year old wife, whose body, with the neck broken, was found in the Blanchard River Sept. 14.

The woman was arrested by Detective S. M. Tudor of Dayton, O., who was in Gilboa two days investigating the death and who filed the homicide charge against Mrs. Conner.

Mrs. Conner, who was Sylvia Wagner, was married to Archie

Conner three weeks ago. Conner is the Gilboa blacksmith who discovered the almost nude body of Mrs. Helmer, three days after her disappearance.

Mrs. Conner's parents live in Napoleon.

William Drum, father of the murdered girl, and Putnam County commissioners have offered $5,000 reward each for conviction of the murderer.

Coroner Peter Bixel held a second inquest when Putnam County authorities gave an opinion that the death was accidental. Bixel maintained the murder theory and refused to change his findings.

EXPLOSION DEATH TOLL MOUNTS TO 18; FIREMEN SEARCH RUINS

LYNN, Mass., Nov. 9.—A twisted mass of cement and steel—the charred ruins of a funeral parlor that blasted, tore and burned to death eighteen persons and injured scores—was searched by firemen today for bodies as this New England city mourned the victims of the worst disaster in its history.

Sudden and terrific, a chemical-cellulose explosion yesterday shattered the one and one-half story factory building of the Preble Box Company's plant and threw a flame into neighboring tenement houses.

Mrs. Harry Blaney and five children were burned to death when the flame from the explosion enveloped their home. Blaney was reported dying from burns and two other Blaney children were badly burned.

Eleven workmen were killed. Two of them had been either hurled to the street by the force of the explosion or had run out, their clothing on fire, screaming for help. They were found dead on the street.

Besides the Blaneys, four men and a woman were in Lynn Hospital, badly burned, three of them possibly fatally.

The cause of the explosion may never be known—anything from the careless use of a cigarette (a violation of the factory rules) to spontaneous combustion due to the chemicals in use at the plant had been advanced as reasons.

Mayor Ralph S. Bader, one of the first city officials to reach the scene, ordered an investigation.

FRENCH QUESTION MISSING WITNESS

PARIS, Nov. 9.—The French government has ordered Henry M. Blackmer, missing witness in the Teapot Dome oil investigations in the United States, to appear for questioning tomorrow before the procurator of the Republic. It was considered probable that authorities would make an exception in Blackmer's case and allow him to remain at liberty rather than arrest him.

NEELY DEFEATED

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Nov. 9.—Democratic leaders today conceded the election of Henry D. Hatfield, Republican candidate for United States senator, over Matthew Neely, Democrat, incumbent. It returns from all but thirty-four of the state's 2310 precincts gave Hatfield 223,281, and Neely 313,462. President-elect Herbert Hoover carried the state by a 110,000 majority.

NAVARRO IN OPERA

BERLIN, Nov. 9.—Ramon Navarro, motion picture star, has completed his musical studies, it was announced here today, and he will appear in Berlin opera during the current season in the role of Cavardossi in "Tosca."

COMMITTS SUICIDE

COLUMBUS, Nov. 9.—Floyd Hunter, 23, is dead here, an alleged suicide. No reason for the deed could be learned. His body was found by a sister.

SUES FOR SLANDER

LANCASTER, O., Nov. 9.—Charging slander, C. O. Beals, defeated Republican candidate for prosecuting attorney of Fairfield County, has filed suit here against Henry Blosser of Violet Township, who is his neighbor, for $10,000 damages. The petition alleges that on Oct. 18 Blosser said that Beals is bootlegging and selling whiskey and "has barrels of it."

MOVIE MAN DIES

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 9.—Mauritz Stiller, 45, pioneer motion picture producer, died here yesterday. Stiller directed and brought to prominence such stars as Pola Negri, Greta Garbo, Lars Hansen, and Victor Seastrom.

ACCUSES INSPECTOR

SPRINGFIELD, Nov. 9.—John E. Powers, city plumbing inspector, today faced charges of embezzling $132 of city funds. The charge was lodged by a state examiner after an investigation of the city accounts.

TOTAL GIVEN DEATH PENALTY; NUN GETS LONG PRISON TERM

Both Convicted Of Obregon Murder In Mexico

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 9.—The mad young draughtsman who assassinated General Alvaro Obregon, president-elect of Mexico, must face a firing squad and a nun of the Roman Catholic Church accused of complicity must serve a prison sentence.

Jose de Leon Toral, was convicted by a jury and sentenced to death before the firing squad. The same jury found Mother Superior Concepcion guilty of being the intellectual author of the crime and sentenced her to twenty years in prison—the most extreme penalty that can be given a woman in Mexico.

Both were prepared for the sentence.

Toral, just before the verdict was read, looked out over the small crowd of newspapermen in the courtroom and said:

"I expect nothing but death but I hope when I am dead that the people will forget their hatred."

He rode away from the presidential office in San Angel in a motor car, his arm draped around the driver of the car, towards the penitentiary. A smile lighted his rather wan face. Once he sighted a friend. He waved cheerfully.

The nun, riding in a motor car in the rear, was wistful.

She looked downward, just as she had when the verdict was returned.

There was quiet in the courtroom when the verdict was returned against this young man who confessed to killing the popular former president. Both sat motionless.

The nun looked down. She made no motion and her face was almost a mask.

The defense has five days to appeal to the higher court, but this already is assured. Should this appeal fail the case will be appealed to President Plutarco Calles for clemency.

BOARD OF CLEMENCY HOPPE'S LAST HOPE

OHIO STATE PENITENTIARY, Columbus, Nov. 9.—Unless the state board of clemency or the supreme court intercedes, Charles Hoppe, Toledo chauffeur, will be executed tonight for the murder of 7 year old Dorothy Szelagowski.

The board of clemency reconvened today to consider a plea for commutation of sentence while the supreme court was considering a petition in error.

At the same time Attorney General Edward C. Turner was preparing a ruling to Warden P. E. Thomas as to whether a man may be executed while a petition in error is pending.

"I will abide by Turner's ruling," Thomas said. "If he rules against Hoppe, we will proceed with the execution."

VOLCANO ERUPTION DRIVES 12,000 TO SAFETY FROM LAVA

Damage Mounts To Millions; Crater Seen From Plane

CATANIA, Sicily, Nov. 9.—The devastating eruption of Mount Etna continued unabated at the source today and millions of lire damage had been done in the peaceful valleys that lie on the slopes of the mountainside.

The full realization of the wrath of the great crater became known when Prof. Gaetano Ponte, director of the observatory for the volcano, flew over the crater. He watched the three flows of lava spew from their pits and start hurtling down the mountainside.

There is no abatement of the force of the destruction, he reported. The speed at the start sometimes reached 400 meters an hour. Fortunately as the molten lava streaks down the mountainside its power decreases and at some of the bases the speed now is estimated at no more than five meters an hour.

Down in the valley below the ordinarily peaceful mountainside there is the picture of utmost desolation.

Three destructive streams have poured down out of the crater, sweeping all vegetation before them. At times these streams have reached a velocity of 130 meters an hour, the natives reported, as they fled from their homes in front of the onrushing avalanche of molten rock and ore.

The three streams are expected to join at the sea Saturday and the natives of this hillside country hope that the danger then may stop.

Everything will be all right provided another outbreak does not start in the great crater which has stood as a signal of danger to the peaceful valley for centuries.

Twelve thousand persons are homeless as result of this latest outbreak and they are housed in the schools and cement housebuildings which have withstood the damaging force of the volcano.

Two persons have been killed. A man and his wife, who had lived in the peaceful agrarian valley for years, died in each other's arms on the roof of their farm house.

DOCTOR ELECTED

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 9.—Dr. C. D. Barrett of Oberlin, Lorain County health commissioner, is the new president of the Ohio Society of Sanitarians. He was elected at the annual state health commissioners' conference here. Other officers elected were Dr. E. R. Hlatt, Troy, first vice president; Miss Marian G. Howell, Cleveland, second vice president; Dr. E. R. Shaffer of the state health department, secretary-treasurer.

BABES IN THE WHITE HOUSE

Hoover Grandchildren Will Romp Where Roosevelt Kiddies Once Played

PALO ALTO, Calif., Nov. 9.—Children will romp about the White House in the next administration for the first time in twenty years.

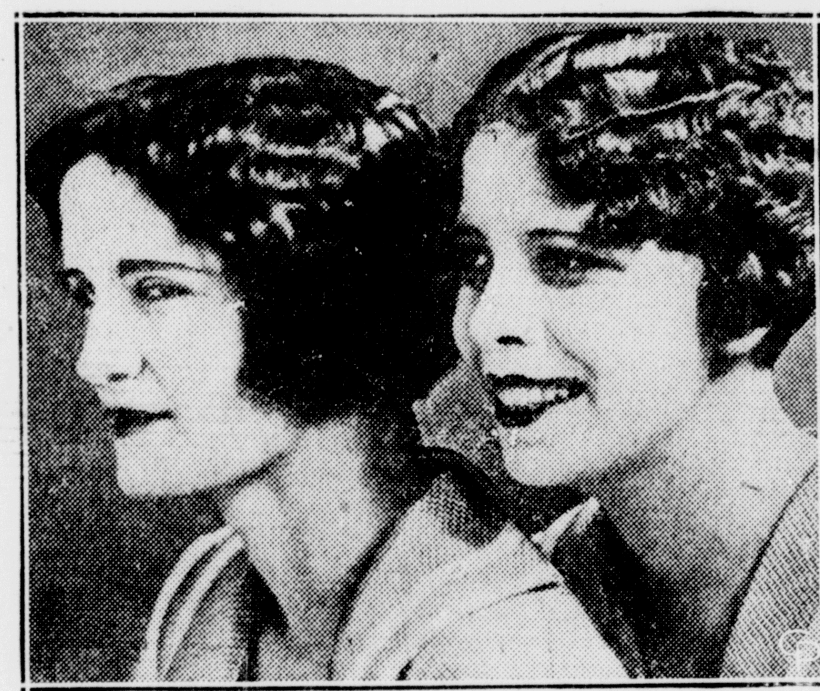

Herbert Hoover the third is just a year old now, to be true, but within two or three years he will have reached the age that delights in a velocipede on such places as the east room's shiny floor, which have not been marred since young Quentin Roosevelt, who now occupies a soldier's grave in France, urged his pony to try the slippery footings.

Herbert's sister, flaxen-haired, blue-eyed Peggy, already has reached the mischievous age. Knowing her grandfather only as a big, kindly man and not as president-elect of the United States, she marched into his study here, where he is pondering affairs of state and planning his administration, calmly pushes aside his papers and insists on a romp.

And the president-elect sets aside important matters and plays with his two-and-a-half year old granddaughter. He is proud of her. People tell him she is the living image of him, and needs only a cigar in her pet little mouth to be as double as far as facial features are concerned.

Her father and mother will not live in the White House all the time, but they will be in and out

SEEK SLAYER IN DOUBLE MURDER

Working on the theory that one of two pretty young women was clubbed to death in a fit of murderous rage and that the other was killed to seal her lips, police of Dallas, Tex., are searching for the slayer of Mrs. Bessie Lynch, left, aged 21, and Mrs. Cleo Lieto, her chum, both employees of a Dallas candy company. The battered bodies of the two girls were found in a corn field three miles from Dallas. Police believe the murderer picked up both girls at a dance and then drove them to a lonely road where the double crime was committed.

WORK WITHOUT PAY

BEDFORD, Nov. 9.—By volunteering to work without pay for the next two months, seventy-five teachers in the Bedford schools have made it possible for the schools to remain open until additional tax money is forthcoming. Supt. A. E. Moody said today. Delinquent tax payments have caused a $40,000 shortage in the school's funds for this year, Moody said.

HOOVER VICTORY IN ELECTION GROWS AS RETURNS COMPILED

Even Smith States Gave Big Popular Vote To Winner

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—The scope of Herbert Hoover's victory in the race for president of the United States continued to grow today.

Latest United Press figures showed Hoover had swept the country by more than 5,000,000 votes in the popular balloting and that his votes in the electoral college stood at 444 as compared with 87 for Governor Alfred E. Smith, the Democratic candidate.

One by one the outstanding precincts reported a greater gain for the commerce secretary. As a few of the mid-western states and the Eastern states came in, it was shown that the Hoover landslide had reached greater proportions than even had been considered as the first ballots came in Tuesday night.

Even North Carolina, one of the states of the solid south, aided in piling up the great popular vote that the Republican party amassed in this election.

The popular vote as shown by the most recent United Press tabulations:

Electoral votes: Hoover 444, Smith 87.

States carried: Hoover 40, Smith 8.

Popular vote: Hoover 20,384,935; Smith 14,224,196; Total 34,609,131.

Hoover's plurality: 6,160,739.

The popular vote by states includes:

Kentucky, popular vote, Hoover 529,337; Smith 364,791; electoral vote, Hoover 13; state was Republican in 1924.

Ohio: popular vote, Hoover 1,602,795; Smith 856,117; electoral vote, Hoover 24; Republican in 1924.

West Virginia: Popular vote, Hoover 284,330; Smith 204,218; electoral vote, Hoover 8; State Republican in 1924.

WOMAN WALKS MILES SEEKING HUSBAND

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 9.—Foot-sore and weary, Mrs. Helen Walker, a timid, silver-haired woman of 60, arrived here last night after a cross-country tramp from Toledo, Ohio, in search of her husband, who left her because he thought himself a burden.

Six years ago, Mrs. Walker said, her husband's health was broken and since that time she has been their sole provider. Four weeks ago they were together at Louisville and Mr. Walker left her to go to Toledo. She has not seen him since.

Disheartened by a futile search of Toledo, the woman turned her steps eastward, searching morgues and charitable institutions, assisted by police and radio broadcasters, and running down clues which have brought her here.

In the thirty-four years of their married life, Mrs. Walker and her husband have been transients along the highways and byways of the nation, selling bulbs and roots for a nursery company.

BONE PUNCTURES MAN'S WINDPIPE

TOLEDO, O., Nov. 9.—Dean Fitzgerald, 28, whose windpipe was punctured by a chicken bone, remained in a serious condition today.

Constant X-ray examinations were being made and physicians believe the bone may pass through the stomach without causing the victim further injury.

Attempts are being made to feed Fitzgerald through a tube but if these are not successful, an operation will be necessary.

BUDGET SUBMITTED SEEKS $1,297,084 TO MEET EXPENSES

New Buildings On Program If Money Is Allowed

Request for $1,297,084 for the O. S. and S. O. Home, for the next two years was among the appropriation budgets totaling $28,319,494 filed Thursday with State Budget Commissioner Merlin Brennenman.

The budget of the Xenia home includes $543,221 for additions and betterments. The major additions and betterments sought are two new cottages, to cost $75,000, a new trades building, to cost $140,000; a new dining room addition and kitchen, costing $128,000 and $50,000 for improvements to present cottages.

The appropriation for the Home for the last eighteen months has been $856,740.

According to C. V. Burton, superintendent, seventeen of the old cottages at the home were remodelled this year but three single cottages and six double structures remain to be remodelled. The six double cottages are not in such great need of repair, he says, but the three single buildings are in the program planned, with all the rear porches to be enclosed. The tops of the porches have been remodelled to house the showers, toilets and lockers for the residents.

The addition to the dining room as planned will be a wing, seating 400 more people. A new kitchen is badly needed in the mind of Superintendent Burton, since the present one is in the basement and is antiquated and not equipped for the needs of the Home.

Superintendent Burton is seeking an entire new kitchen, to be built between the main building and the store building. He is asking the state department for $40,000 for kitchen equipment and $20,000 for the dining room wing.

It is Superintendent Burton's idea to employ regulation trades teachers in charge of a Superintendent of Trades. He says he has reduced the payroll to eliminate surplus jobs and feels, for this reason, that he can ask for the extra money.

He is also asking for $15,000 from the state for the present present lake which is decaying and crumbling. It is the superintendent's plan to clean out the lake so that it can be used for swimming. He is urging the state to connect the Home water system with the Xenia city mains for use in an emergency. Money for this purpose is included in the request, and if granted, Superintendent Burton will confer with city officials with this idea in mind.

Glenn E. Haney, Esq., of Xenia, who has been employed as chief engineer at the home, resigned. Mr. Haney is a graduate in mechanical engineering at Ohio State University and has been with the Barrett Manufacturing Co., at Talcott.

"Heretofore, only stationary engineers have been employed at this home," Superintendent Burton said, "and since this is a small city, it needs a good chief engineer, a job." He has given Mr. Haney the title of "Director of Service."

Haney's appointment was confirmed by the Board of Trustees at the last regular meeting, at which time the budget of the superintendent was also approved.

Raincoats and heavy sweaters have been purchased for the 617 children at the Home and gaiters obtained for the smaller children. Professor O. K. Probasco, new superintendent of schools at the home, is to occupy the former nursery home, on the Burlington Pike soon.

ROOSEVELT WINNER IN NEW YORK RACE

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 9.—Franklin D. Roosevelt, candidate for the vice presidency in 1920 and former under secretary of the navy, will be the next governor of New York state.

The man who replaced Gov. Alfred E. Smith in nomination for the presidency in New York in 1924 and Houston in 1928, won the gubernatorial election in New York state by a plurality of 27,024 over Albert Ottinger, Republican attorney general in the Smith administration.

There are a few precincts still to be heard but there is not sufficient outlying strength to defeat Roosevelt, election officials estimated on basis of returns today.

Latest United Press figures showed Hoover had swept the country by more than 5,000,000 votes in the popular balloting and that his votes in the electoral college stood at 444 as compared with 87 for Governor Alfred E. Smith, the Democratic candidate.

One by one the outstanding precincts reported a greater gain for the commerce secretary. As a few of the mid-western states and the Eastern states came in, it was shown that the Hoover landslide had reached greater proportions than even had been considered as the first ballots came in Tuesday night.

Even North Carolina, one of the states of the solid south, aided in piling up the great popular vote that the Republican party amassed in this election.

The popular vote as shown by the most recent United Press tabulations:

Electoral votes: Hoover 441, Smith 87.

States carried: Hoover 49, Smith 8.

Popular vote: Hoover 20,284,925; Smith 14,224,196; Total 34,609,121.

Hoover's plurality: 6,130,729.

The popular vote by states includes:

Kentucky, popular vote, Hoover 529,337; Smith 364,791; electoral vote, Hoover 12; state was Republican in 1924.

Ohio: popular vote, Hoover 1,402,795; Smith 856,117; electoral vote, Hoover 24; Republican in 1924.

West Virginia: Popular vote, Hoover 284,330; Smith 204,218; electoral vote, Hoover 5; State Republican in 1924.

WOMAN WALKS MILES SEEKING HUSBAND

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 9.—Footsore and weary, Mrs. Helen Walker, a timid, silver-haired woman of 67, arrived here last night after a cross-country tramp from Toledo, Ohio, in search of her husband, who left her because he thought himself a burden.

Six years ago, Mrs. Walker said, her husband's health was broken and since that time she has been their sole provider. Four weeks ago they were together at Louisville and Mr. Walker left her to go to Toledo. She has not seen him since.

Disheartened by a futile search of Toledo, the woman turned her steps eastward, searching morgues and charitable institutions, assisted by police and radio broadcasts, and running down clues which have brought her here.

In the thirty-four years of their married life, Mrs. Walker and her husband have been transients along the highways and byways of the nation, selling bulbs and roots for a nursery company.

BONE PUNCTURES MAN'S WINDPIPE

TOLEDO, O., Nov. 9.—Dean Fitzgerald, 28, whose windpipe was punctured by a chicken bone, remained in a serious condition today.

Constant X-ray examinations were being made and physicians believe the bone may pass through the stomach without causing the victim further injury.

Attempts are being made to feed Fitzgerald through a tube but if these are not successful, an operation will be necessary.

BUDGET SUBMITTED SEEKS $1,297,084 TO MEET EXPENSES

New Buildings On Program If Money Is Allowed

Request for $1,297,084 for the O. S. and S. O. Home, for the next two years was among the appropriation budgets filed Thursday with State Budget Commissioner Merline Brennenman.

The budget of the Xenia home includes $543,221 for additions and betterments. The major additions and betterments sought are two new cottages, to cost $75,000, a new trades building, to cost $140,000; a new dining room addition and kitchen, costing $128,000 and $50,000 for improvements to present cottages.

The appropriation for the Home for the last eighteen months has been $356,740.

According to C. V. Burton, superintendent, seventeen of the old cottages at the home were remodelled this year but three single cottages and six double structures remain to be remodelled. The six double cottages are not in such great need of repair, he says, but the three single buildings are in the program planned, with all the rear porches to be enclosed. The tops of the porches have been remodelled to house the showers, toilets and lockers for the residents.

The addition to the dining room as planned will be a wing, seating 400 more people. A new kitchen is badly needed in the mind of Superintendent Burton, since the present one is in the basement and is antiquated and not equipped for the needs of the Home.

Superintendent Burton is seeking an entire new kitchen, to be built between the main building and the store building. He is asking the state department for $48,000 for a two-story kitchen, $18,000 for kitchen equipment and $7,000 for the dining room wing.

It is Superintendent Burton's idea to employ regulation trades teachers in charge of a Superintendent of Trades. He says he has reduced the payroll to eliminate surplus jobs and feels, for this reason, that he can ask for the extra money.

He is also asking for $15,000 from the state for the new present lake wall is decaying and crumbling. It is the superintendent's plan to clean out the lake so that it can be used for swimming. He is urging the erection of a new standpipe and plans to connect the Xenia city mains for use in an emergency. Money for this purpose is included in the request, and if granted, Superintendent Burton will center with city officials with this idea in mind.

Glenn E. Haney, Linton, O., has been employed as chief engineer at the home, succeeding Vera Edwards, who resigned. Mr. Haney is a graduate in mechanical engineering at Ohio State University and has been with the Barrett Manufacturing Co., at Linton, "Heretofore, only stationary engineers have been employed at the home," Superintendent Burton said, "and since this is a small city, it needs a good chief engineer for the job."

He has given Mr. Haney the title of "Director of Service."

Haney's appointment was confirmed by the Board of Trustees at the last regular meeting, at which time the budget of the superintendent was also approved.

Raincoats and heavy sweaters have been purchased for the 617 children at the Home and gossamer obtained for the smaller children. Professor O. K. Probasco, new superintendent of schools at the home, is to occupy the former nursery home, on the Burlington Pike soon.

ROOSEVELT WINNER IN NEW YORK RACE

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 9.—Franklin D. Roosevelt, candidate for the vice presidency in 1920 and former under secretary of the navy, will be the next governor of New York state.

The man who replaced Gov. Alfred E. Smith in nomination for the presidency at the Democratic conventions in New York in 1924 and Houston in 1928, won the gubernatorial election in New York state by a plurality of 27,024 over Albert Ottinger, Republican attorney general in the Smith administration.

There are a few precincts still to be heard from but there is not sufficient outlying strength to defeat Roosevelt, election officials estimated on basis of returns today.

CROSS-WORD PUZZLES

Dear Editor:
Do you know you are agitating the sale of other newspapers in your city by not having a crossword puzzle in your paper?

I am an ardent crossword puzzle fan and I know scores of others in this town who are also but are necessitated to buy a Dayton or Cincinnati paper in order to find their favorite pastime.

Do you not think that a crossword puzzle would not only add an interesting feature to your paper but also increase your circulation and decrease the circulation of other newspapers in this city?

Would you kindly answer me in The Gazette?

Sincerely,
A Puzzle Fan

Note—THE GAZETTE discontinued its crossword puzzles some time ago in the belief that their popularity had faded. However, this newspaper is willing to listen to any appeal within reason for special features not now published and for which there seems to be a popular demand. Let readers who are crossword puzzle fans write the editor. Should the demand for the return of this feature be impressive, the GAZETTE will publish crossword puzzles.—Editor.

WHITELAW REID ELECTED TO JOURNALISM'S HALL OF FAME

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 9.—Eight pioneer Ohio newspapermen were elected to Ohio Journalism's first hall of fame today.

The distinction is a posthumous one, inasmuch as the recipients are dead.

Conferring of the honor was announced in connection with the opening of the all-Ohio newspaper conference here.

Those elected were: Whitelaw Reid (1837-1912), native of Xenia, Civil War correspondent for the Cincinnati Gazette, editor and owner of the New York Herald-Tribune, 1872-1912.

Samuel Sullivan Cox (1824-1889), native of Zanesville, editor of the Ohio Statesman, 1853-1856, in congress sixteen years, once U. S. minister to Turkey.

Murat Halstead (1829-1908), native of Butler County, joined staff of Cincinnati Commercial in 1853 and in 1865 became its chief owner and later of the Commercial Gazette; still later editor of the Brooklyn Standard-Union. David Ross Locke (1833-1888), better known under his pen name of Petroleum V. Nasby, who in 1860 began his famous series of letters in the Pindar Jeffersonian and later in the Toledo Blade, of which he became editor and part owner.

William Dean Howells (1837-1920), native of Martins Ferry, began as printer, later legislative correspondent for Cleveland and Cincinnati papers, from 1858 to 1861 on staff of Ohio State Journal in Venice. On return resumed literary career, becoming dean of American letters.

William Maxwell (1755-1809). Wins $5,000 Prize

For the establishment of the Berry schools, near Rome, Ga., where mountain youth may get an education, Miss Martha Berry, above, of Rome, has been awarded a $5,000 prize. The prize is given annually by a national magazine for the American woman who its judges consider contributed the most outstanding achievement of the year. The prize is for 1927.

There comes to me from the years that have vanished. The beautiful years with their mystical glow. A sound that the troubles of time have not banished. That sweetens the life of the dear long ago.

I look to the garret wherein has been hidden. A friend that today makes life sweet and real; And back from the past with its dreaming unbidden, Comes the halcyon days of the old spinning wheel.

It's music delightful how often I cherish. How oft in my light-hearted child-hood I spun; Though many a scene of the past is forgotten, I spin in my dreams in the shade and the sun.

Aye, my hair is now white as the snow in the gloaming, But deep in my bosom affection I feel. And I sigh as my heart fills with incessant longing. For the whir and the song of the old spinning wheel.

When we hackled the flax how well I remember. The nights long ago by the old country hearth; The song of the wheel hushed the wilds of December. And filled with its music the by-way of earth.

I think of the work of the wheel and our fingers. I think of the garments we lovingly spun; And round it today thought bewitchingly lingers. Though fast to the westward is setting life's sun.

How sweet are the visions that come from the wildwood. The vision that many a sorrow doth heal; They bring back the long-vanished pleasure of childhood. When so often I sat by the old spinning wheel.

I love it today as I loved it where yonder. The farm house is standing deserted and lone. The years as they go make affection the fonder. And link me anew to the joys I have known.

So often I sit in the mystical gloaming. Of life where the shadows of age softly steal; And call back my thoughts that forever are roaming. And cluster them all 'round the old spinning wheel.

ANOTHER UNSOLICITED TRIBUTE FOR ALL-BRAN

Good news for sufferers from constipation

Mrs. Kiell sat down and wrote us a letter when she had proved ALL-BRAN a safe "sure-cure" for constipation. Read her voluntary tribute:

April 4, 1927
"I have been using Kellogg's ALL-BRAN for quite some time and I want to tell you how much I appreciate it. I have found it a sure-cure for constipation, and know it is a remarkable regulator for the stomach. After using it, my family and I certainly will not be without it. I have even gone so far as to send some of it to my mother in Poland, Europe."

Gratefully yours,
Mrs. ANNA KIELL,
77 Wolcott Terrace, Newark, N. J.

Perhaps you know what a terrible affliction constipation is. Blighting wherever it thrives. Ruining health. Marrying beauty. Causing headaches, back pains, foul breath, loss of sleep—indeed, leading to more than forty serious diseases.

But did you know it can be easily relieved by a pleasant cereal food? Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is guaranteed to bring relief. Eat two table-spoonfuls daily—chronic cases, with every meal. Serve with milk or cream—fruits or honey added. Use in cooking. At grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

NO VOTE CHANGE

Official tabulation of the vote cast in Greene County at the presidential election last Tuesday was completed by the Board of Elections Thursday but resulted merely in slightly increasing the majorities rolled up by all of the Republican candidates. Because of the heavy vote cast and the necessity of inserting ballots of absentee voters on the poll books the task of completing the official count was slow work.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

YES, WE KNOW—Hast thou not known? hast thou not heard, that the everlasting God, the Lord, the Creator of the ends of the earth, fainteth not, neither is weary? there is no searching of his understanding.—Isa. 40:28.

AMERICA'S APPIAN WAY

A 120-foot, hard surfaced highway belting the United States from the Atlantic to the Pacific seems like the Utopian dream of a motorist, but the road may become a reality within the next decade if a bill creating a commission to investigate the plan is passed at the next session of congress.

The bill, which is sponsored by the senate postoffice and post roads committee and approved by Secretary Jardine, provides for a commission which will report on the probable cost of the road and which will also work out a plan to finance the project. The bill provides that the right-of-way shall be 500 feet wide and the road proper shall be approximately 120 feet wide, allowing for four streams of traffic each way. The road will run as nearly as possible through the center of the United States.

Feeder roads will be built from Maine to Florida on the east coast, and from Washington to Southern California on the western coast, and several others between, including the proposed north and south super-highway across Ohio.

Two smaller roads, paralleling the central highway, probably will be built along the northern and southern boundaries of the United States. The main east and west road will not run through any towns with a population of more than 2,500 persons.

Gigantic as the plan seems, it still is feasible, and the road will be built sometime. Senator DuPont, originator of the bill, and Senator Moses, chairman of the senate road committee, point out that the cost of one battleship would build a road from Washington, D. C., to Florida, and compared with the amount spent for militaristic purposes the cost of the road pales. The plan for the road calls for a 500-foot right-of-way and the authors of the bill maintain that the rental from the 200-foot strip on each side will pay for the cost of maintenance, after the road is built. Restaurants, filling stations, stores, pipe lines, light and power wires, all will contribute to the cost of the road in many sections and in other sections of the country the land may be rented for agricultural purposes.

Other desirable features of the proposed highway are that traffic will not be delayed in large cities and the road will be built above high water marks and under railway crossings. And although the road does not go through large cities it will be available to 52 million people who live within a 100-mile radius on each side of the proposed highway.

Such a road eventually would be the vertebrae of a great federal and state highway system which would carry the products of a great nation to the cities and to ports for foreign shipment. And once again the east and the west would be bound closer together.

FORGETFULNESS

One of the most difficult things for us to do is to forget the things we ought to forget. Many think they have poor memories and complain that they forget. But it is easier to remember than to forget. If you have suffered because of someone's thoughtless action—or even a thoughtless remark—you may forgive the offense. We can all forgive offenses, either serious or trifling. But it is so hard to forget, to smooth out the page as though nothing had ever been there. It takes such an apparently little thing to make such a lasting mark. There would be so much more happiness in life if only people could forget more easily. Forgiveness is easy. Forgetfulness is hard.

VOTE

The particular weakness of a republic is not to be expressed in the character of the men elected to office. The fault goes deeper. It lies in the widespread indifference of citizens. When we learn that only 50 per cent of the voters voted at the presidential election four years ago it does not prove that there is anything wrong with our form of government but it does prove that there is a lamentable lack of responsiveness on the part of an astonishing number of the individuals who compose the republic. We will get just as good a government as our interest warrants.

GROWTH

There is cause for some disappointment when we observe religious intolerance, especially on the part of those who by training and experience should know better. But there is no deep cause for discouragement. The world grows more tolerant, and rapidly so. In ages past men and women were tortured and burned at the stake by thousands because of their religious beliefs. Quakers and Catholics alike were punished by the early American colonists because they would not conform to the established church. There has been intolerance and indefensible punishment on both sides. Religionists have burned each other. No church has had a monopoly on severity. Today we talk a lot of intolerance, but we undoubtedly have a growing regard for the religious opinions of those who are not members of our creed. We do not put them in jail or take them out on the village commons and set a fire under them. Our injustice at least does not run into beastly cruelty. The world does move a little.

OCTOBER

One gets a thrill out of spring—the first warm sunshine, blue sky, a sudden April rain, snappy air. New flowers are lovely, and trees fresh and green. It's pleasant to shake off the shell of winter, to come out and sparkle a bit. Spring is like youth—all things rather vivid and intense and often beautiful. But October—it is like middle age. Not so snappy as youth, but mellow, more serene, ever happier. Youth does not know. Middle age, having tried both spring and fall, chooses October.

Broiled Steak
Peppers Stuffed With Creamed Celery
Cabbage and Tomato Salad
Baked Apples or Baked Bananas
Coffee

I am trying to "put over" the idea of using more fruit for desserts. A well known physician recently printed an article saying nice things about the banana. Bananas may be had almost everywhere, all the year 'round. Let's get in the habit of using more of them, as the doctor maintains they contain many excellent food properties.

Today's Recipes

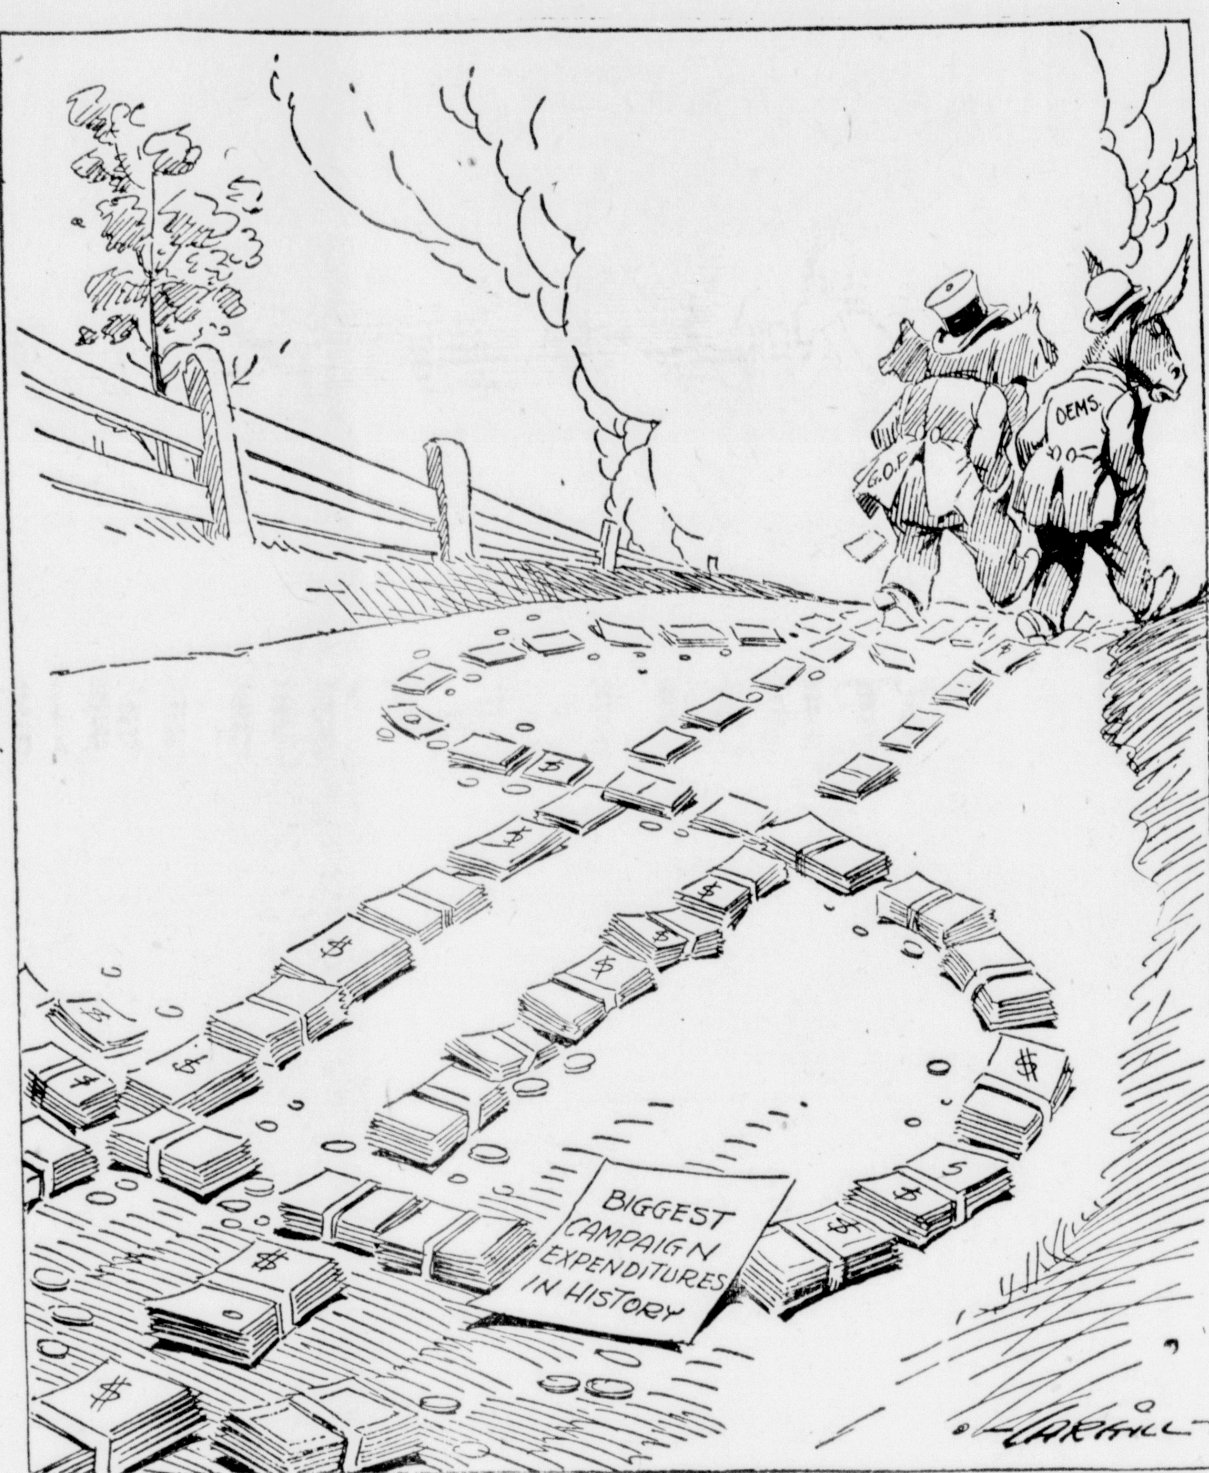

Peppers Stuffed With Creamed Celery—The outside stalks of celery are diced and cooked in a very little water until tender. The peppers are boiled about ten minutes after stems and seeds are removed. A white sauce is made for the celery and the pepper shells are filled with this creamed mixture. Grated cheese is put on the top and they are put under the broiler flame for two or three minutes or baked in a hot oven until the cheese melts.

Baked Apples—Wash and core four apples. With a sharp knife cut a line through the skin around the middle of each apple. This will prevent the skin bursting as the apples cook. Allow a quarter of a cupful of sugar mixed with a quarter of a teaspoonful of cinnamon to five apples. Fill the cavities with this mixture, place in a baking dish and cover the bottom of the dish with hot water. Bake in a hot oven, basting occasionally with the syrup. More water may be added as needed. Apples may be "baked" on top of the stove by placing in a covered dripping pan and cooking slowly, basting occasionally. Corn syrup used instead of sugar produces a glazed appearance. Raisins and nuts may be used to stuff the cavities of the apples. In this case mix the sugar and water and pour over the apples.

Finnan Haddie a la Delmonico (Mrs. Mary Morton's Daily Tested Recipe.)

Make a cream sauce of milk and flour and stir into it the beaten yolk of an egg. Pick the fish into small pieces and brown in a tablespoon of melted butter, then add to the sauce in the chafing dish. Just before serving add a teaspoon of grated cheese and a hard boiled egg, the yolk of which has been grated and white cut into small pieces. Season with red pepper and salt to taste. Serve over toast. This may also be baked in a baking dish with a slight covering of crumbs over the top.

HOME AGAIN, HOME AGAIN, JOG, JOG, JOG!

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—Congress is behaving with rank injustice, and defying the constitution like the veriest bootlegger, in neglecting to take over the house of representatives so as to give more members to states which have grown rapidly in recent years.

We all know why. What some states are entitled to gain, others must lose. The latter block any change.

The constitution requires one after each census—once every decade. The last one was on the 1910 basis. The 1920 census was ignored. Prospects are that 1930's will be ignored too.

The validity of this year's presidential election is open to attack, due to congress' unconstitutional course, for the electoral college is chosen on the basis of the states' congressional representation, and the congressional representation of at least 19 of them is all wrong.

On a population basis California, Connecticut, Michigan, New Jersey, North Carolina, Ohio, Texas, and Washington, among them, are denied a dozen electors they ought to have; Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Mississippi, Missouri, Nebraska, Rhode Island, and Vermont are allowed a dozen too many.

Expert estimates forecast a gross as gross an inequality under the 1930 census as at present if congress still balks.

Obviously such delay in a congressional reapportionment is most unfair.

Nevertheless, even if and when made, it will not do all toward righting the wrongs that certain of the present situation's victims expect.

The theory is that the last few years' tremendous increase in the country's urban population is what has upset the balance of representation, and that, with a reapportionment, the big cities will gain control in Washington. The fact is, although congress fixes the number of each state's national representatives, the various state legislatures divide them up by districts (city and country) to suit themselves.

Now most of our big cities have long groaned under the domination of rural legislatures. Survivals from a day before the cityward trend in America's population, had fairly begun.

Does it not stand to reason that these rural legislatures will so gerrymander their respective states, whenever occasion arises, as to give the farmer folk none the worst of the new deal?

A congressional reapportionment certainly would mean fairer presidential elections.

Otherwise, as to the big cities, it might easily mean only a jump from the national legislative frying pan into the state legislative fire.

The truth is that census figures, indicating a change from a rural to an urban majority throughout the United States between 1910 and 1920, probably have misled city dwellers into imagining themselves a more formidable bloc than they really are.

The 1920 urban majority was only 51.4 per cent.

To be sure, it is larger now. But it must be remembered that the census bureau classes every population center over 2,500 as a city.

It is doubtful if the average inhabitant of a city of only 2,500—or even a great deal more than that—is not more essentially rural than urban.

Genuine city sympathies probably are not very generally to be found in places much under 100,000.

If we count that as a minimum, our urban population is little above one-fourth our total.

How to Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

Arms, Wrists and Hands

Pretty arms are almost necessities to the modern young woman, who is constantly faced and frequently phased by the command of fashion for sleeveless gowns.

We realize that our arms are not merely useful appendages, but very important and significant beauty attributes. On the condition of arms, elbows, wrists and hands will very often depend the success of an entire costume.

Before I go into the arm exercise which my title promises, let me tell you again about the correct care of the skin of arms and elbows. Perhaps I've told you this story before, but it brings up a point so often overlooked, that I cannot help but feel it is well worth repeating.

In Paris, there is an objectionable phase to be heard at some of the leading couturiers. It is "the American elbow." American women, I'm sorry to say, have earned this appellation by the disconcerting elbow condition to be seen on the average woman who goes over there to be clothed. Look honestly and frankly into your mirror now. Have you, the American elbow? If you haven't, don't run any risks. And if you have, correct it by all means, and at once. Either the twice a day regular use of cleansing cream or the daily use of a penetrating grainy washing preparation will rapidly correct an unlovely elbow. Then, when you have restored softness and roundness, protect it by putting in a little balm or a rich cream at least twice a day. You will soon have elbows to be proud of!

Another unpleasant and unlovely arm affliction is goose pimples. The best way to correct these is through the friction obtained by the scientific, grainy preparation I have above mentioned, finished off with cold water and a good rub with a coarse towel.

Once a week try taking an arm rubdown with common table salt, before your morning cleansing. Follow this with a light application of cleansing cream, or else your skin will become dry and irritated.

Now for the exercises. For hands, wrists and fore-

Kellygrams

By FRED C. KELLY

Why is it, I once heard somebody ask, that the people who are almost invariably pleasant folk who put on no airs?

There is probably a simple explanation of this. One doesn't meet four-flushers in the woods because no four-flusher is likely to go there. Or if he did he wouldn't tarry long. He would have little to gain by being in the woods. Once he gets away from an artificial city background, he is obliged to show goods. If he boasts about his swimming prowess, or his ability in a canoe, he is sure to have an opportunity to prove just what he can do.

Big talk, like expensive jewelry, may impress a head waiter in a flashy restaurant, but on a camping trip it only serves to make one ridiculous.

Baked Bananas—Bake bananas in the skins in a moderate oven until they become dark in color and soft to the touch. Remove from the skins and sprinkle with granulated sugar and a few drops of lemon juice to each banana. Serve hot as a dessert. Green bananas may be baked and served without sugar and lemon to take the place of potatoes.

Diet and Health

GREAT-GRANDMOTHER ADVISED TO EXERCISE. REDUCE SLOWLY

Should a Great-Grandmother Reduce?

"I am 80 years old, 5 feet 6-1/2 inches tall, and weigh 180. My arms and legs are not at all fat. All my excess is on my hips and stomach. I enjoy what might be called perfect health. I sleep excellently and can hear and see as well as anyone. Have no rheumatism, never have a back-ache or pain anywhere. But I haven't the figure I fancy, even at 80—and a great-grandmother! I've spent my summers in France for a number of years, with my daughter and I think no more of crossing the ocean than of going to New York."

"About 10 years ago I gave up meat, and later tea and coffee. My diet is mostly vegetables, fruits, whole wheat bread and milk. I eat very little, less than half the quantity that ordinary people do, and especially eat lightly at night. I do not walk so much as I would if I did not have so much to carry. I fear you will smile at all this, but I hope you have the key to unlock what I have so far found closed."

"MRS. S."

Yes, I do smile, Mrs. S., but it is a smile of happiness, to realize that one can live to an age, be in almost-perfect health, and have necessities of all the mental faculties, including the desire to look one's best. It is apparently only your excess weight that puts you out of the perfect health class.

It is normal and therefore right that you should eat very lightly, for the food requirements of old people are materially lessened. A little too much bread and butter, and the only suggestion I can make is to cut these down. I wouldn't try to increase your exercises, and I wouldn't try to lose more than one-half to three-quarters of a pound a week. And as you lose, perhaps you can increase your walking, but be careful not to overtax yourself. For those who are interested, we have a pamphlet on reducing and gaining weight.

Blistered Feet. "I am a city mail carrier, and am bothered with blistered feet. Would like to know what would help the blisters to heal. The only thing I do is to open them and use an antiseptic. Sometimes a blister lasts a week at it comes."

There is always the possibility of an infection after a blister, so one should always keep them protected. Put on a layer of cotton, and cover with adhesive. Take these off every day before you bathe; then apply fresh ones.

Do your shoes fit well, J. That is a very important consideration for anyone, especially one who walks much.

Freak Diets

and Lowered Resistance. B.—You undoubtedly lowered your resistance by going on that freak diet, and you must go to a physician and have a thorough examination and a course outlined for you.

Meanwhile, be out in the sun, and air as much as you can, get plenty of sleep in a well-ventilated room and, if possible, sleep out of doors. Your chills and fever show you have some poisoning from some cause. It may be possible that you have contracted tuberculosis, because this not infrequently happens to young people who go on "freak" diets to reduce. But tuberculosis is curable, so don't be alarmed.

We have an article on Balanced Diet and one on Tuberculosis, you may have.

Living and Loving

GIRL WHO PUTS ON AIRS NO FAVORITE WITH MATES

A short time ago I printed a letter from a high school girl who said she did not make friends easily and was generally left out of the school doings. She wondered why the young people who seemed friendly enough at school, did not ask her to go with them to class rallies, etc. Now one of the readers of this column has written telling about girl she knows who is generally ignored, giving the reasons. I do not think Molly, my little former correspondent, is in the class with this girl, but it might explain why some are not popular, and it could be as well to check up on ourselves and see if even in private charges brought against this girl could possibly apply to us.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: It was with genuine interest that I read the complaint of 'Molly,' who claims she cannot make friends and that her schoolmates do not ask her out with them. I will avail myself of the invitation you made for 'help from your readers' and think that perhaps the following may be of interest to quite a few."

"I am employed in the office of one of the largest life insurance companies in the country and come into contact with many girls and young men. In our department there is one young girl who is quiet in manners, pleasing features, neatly dressed and steady friends either with girls or boys. The trouble is that she thinks too much of herself. She considers herself above the average run of office girls and not worth an attention to her accomplishments. The young lady never starts an argument—possibly because she cares to argue with her because she always considers her opinion final and infallible. No matter what she designs to bestow her consideration on."

"If anyone asks her out she stretches both arms out in front of you, and open all your fingers as wide and far apart as possible. Then slowly clench your fists. Relax and then repeat eight or ten times."

"Hold your arms outstretched, palms facing inward. Slowly draw the fingers together and twist the wrists so that the backs of your hands face each other. Repeat eight times."

"Place hands on shoulders, elbows at sides. Thrust the forearms outward to shoulder level. Repeat very slowly eight times."

talks and talks and expresses her own opinions and the other fellow gets no chance at all. If she is asked to a party she is ever on the lookout to call the hostess' attention to error made in the games, cutting in for prizes, etc., and it is small wonder that the crowd prefers to leave her out of their invitation list. She seems to be afflicted with halitosis almost constantly, and once when I broached the subject to her in the most tactful way I could think of, all she thanks I got for it was, 'Well, there must be something wrong with your nose; there's nothing like that going with me.' So, Mrs. Lee, do you not think that the chief cause of this girl being ostracized is that false pride of hers? OBSERVANT."

Undoubtedly, for you have sketched a word picture of a most unpleasant young person. Observant, I don't believe "Molly" is like that. I think her principal trouble is shyness and lack of experience, but a good many of us may look at the picture as presented by you and take a hint. Thank you for your interesting letter. It was too long to print in its entirety.

Sally: Don't try to take a man away from another woman who cares for him. Put yourself in her place and think how you would feel under the circumstances. If he wants to correspond he will ask you if he may write. And under the circumstances I don't think a gift before it leaves would be in very good taste.

Brown Eyes: I think if the really loves you he will seek you company and so out others out. Not just act silly with other girls. Don't you think so? I'd have other boy friends and a good one, only be friendly and pleasant with this boy so as to show him that you like him.

A VOTE OF THANKS

"So am I!" cried Peter. "Mrs. Rabbit, you have made me ashamed of myself for finding fault with the Bobolink after they have been so kind to us."

"Let's they'll hear it, I guess."

"It was sort of mean to find fault with them after they'd been so good to us!" muttered Sonny-Bunny. "There, let's not talk about it any more. The afternoon is still young. How about taking a trip to the cabbage patch, mother? I am as hungry as a fox. Perhaps we can find some carrots to take home to dad."

"Two for yourself, my son and one for your father!" laughed gentle Mrs. Gray Rabbit. "However, I will go with you if you wish me to. I have quite an appetite myself, come to think of it. Goodbye, boys. Come on a visit to Rabbit Hole whenever you are lonely and don't know what else to do; Sonny-Bunny and I will try to make it pleasant for you."

"You bet we will," agreed the little rabbit heartily. "Come on, mother, some of the folks may have gotten there first and nibbled off all the choice leaves. Pulling at her long ear, Sonny-Bunny tried to drag his mother away, and seeing how impatient her small son was, Mrs. Gray Rabbit went with him. Peter was left alone with the dozing Bobolinks, and there seemed nothing left for him to do but to take a nap himself. Now that he thought about it, the sun was warm and the air delicious—in fact, it was exactly the sort of afternoon to take a

AMERICA'S APPIAN WAY

A 120-foot, hard surfaced highway belting the United States from the Atlantic to the Pacific seems like the Utopian dream of a motorist, but the road may become a reality within the next decade if a bill creating a commission to investigate the plan is passed at the next session of congress.

The bill, which is sponsored by the senate postoffice and post roads committee and approved by Secretary Jardine, provides for a commission which will report on the probable cost of the road and which will also work out a plan to finance the project. The bill provides that the right-of-way shall be 500 feet wide and the road proper shall be approximately 120 feet wide, allowing for four streams of traffic each way way. The road will run as nearly as possible through the center of the United States.

Feeder roads will be built from Maine to Florida on the east coast, and from Washington to Southern California on the western coast, and several others between, including the proposed north and south super-highway across Ohio.

Two smaller roads, paralleling the central highway, probably will be built along the northern and southern boundaries of the United States. The main east and west road will not run through any towns with a population of more than 2,500 persons.

Gigantic as the plan seems, it still is feasible, and the road will be built sometime. Senator DuPont, originator of the bill, and Senator Moses, chairman of the senate road committee, point out that the cost of one battleship would build a road from Washington, D. C., to Florida, and compared with the amount spent for militaristic purposes the cost of the road pales. The plan for the road calls for a 500-foot right-of-way and the authors of the bill maintain that the rental from the 200-foot strip on each side will pay for the cost of maintenance, after the road is built. Restaurants, filling stations, stores, pipe lines, light and power wires, all will contribute to the cost of the road in many sections and in other sections of the country the land may be rented for agricultural purposes.

Other desirable features of the proposed highway are that traffic will not be delayed in large cities and the road will be built above high water marks and under railway crossings. And although the road does not go through large cities it will be available to 52 million people who live within a 100-mile radius on each side of the proposed highway.

Such a road eventually would be the vertebrae of a great federal and state highway system which would carry the products of a great nation to the cities and to ports for foreign shipment. And once again the east and the west would be bound closer together.

The people who get married in a few weeks, frequently pay alimony for many years.

FORGETFULNESS

One of the most difficult things for us to do is to forget the things we ought to forget. Many think they have poor memories and complain that they forget. But it is easier to remember than to forget. If you have suffered because of someone's thoughtless action—or even a thoughtless remark—you may forgive the offense. We can all forgive offenses, either serious or trifling. But it is so hard to forget, to smooth out the page as though nothing had ever been there. It takes such an apparently little thing to make such a lasting mark. There would be so much more happiness in life if only people could forget more easily. Forgiveness is easy. Forgetfulness is hard.

VOTE

The particular weakness of a republic is not to be expressed in the character of the men elected to office. The fault goes deeper. It lies in the widespread indifference of citizens. When we learn that only 50 per cent of the voters voted at the presidential election four years ago it does not prove that there is anything wrong with our form of government but it does prove that there is a lamentable lack of responsiveness on the part of an astonishing number of the individuals who compose the republic. We will get just as good a government as our interest warrants.

GROWTH

There is cause for some disappointment when we observe religious intolerance, especially on the part of those who by training and experience should know better. But there is no deep cause for discouragement. The world grows more tolerant, and rapidly so. In ages past men and women were tortured and burned at the stake by thousands because of their religious beliefs. Quakers and Catholics alike were punished by the early American colonists because they would not conform to the established church. There has been intolerance and indefensible punishment on both sides. Religionists have burned each other. No church has had a monopoly on severity. Today we talk a lot of intolerance, but we undoubtedly have a growing regard for the religious opinions of those who are not members of our creed. We do not put them in jail or take them out on the village commons and set a fire under them. Our injustice at least does not run into beastly cruelty. The world does move a little.

OCTOBER

One gets a thrill out of spring—the first warm sunshine, blue sky, a sudden April rain, snappy air. New flowers are lovely, and trees fresh and green. It's pleasant to shake off the shell of winter, to come out and sparkle a bit. Spring is like youth—all things rather vivid and intense and often beautiful. But October—it is like middle age. Not so snappy as youth, but mellow, more serene, ever happier. Youth does not know. Middle age, having tried both spring and fall, chooses October.

Baked Apples or Baked Bananas

I am trying to "put over" the idea of using more fruit for desserts. A well known physician recently printed an article saying nice things about bananas. Bananas may be had almost everywhere, all the year 'round. Let's get in the habit of using more of them, as the doctor maintains they contain many excellent food properties.

Today's Recipes

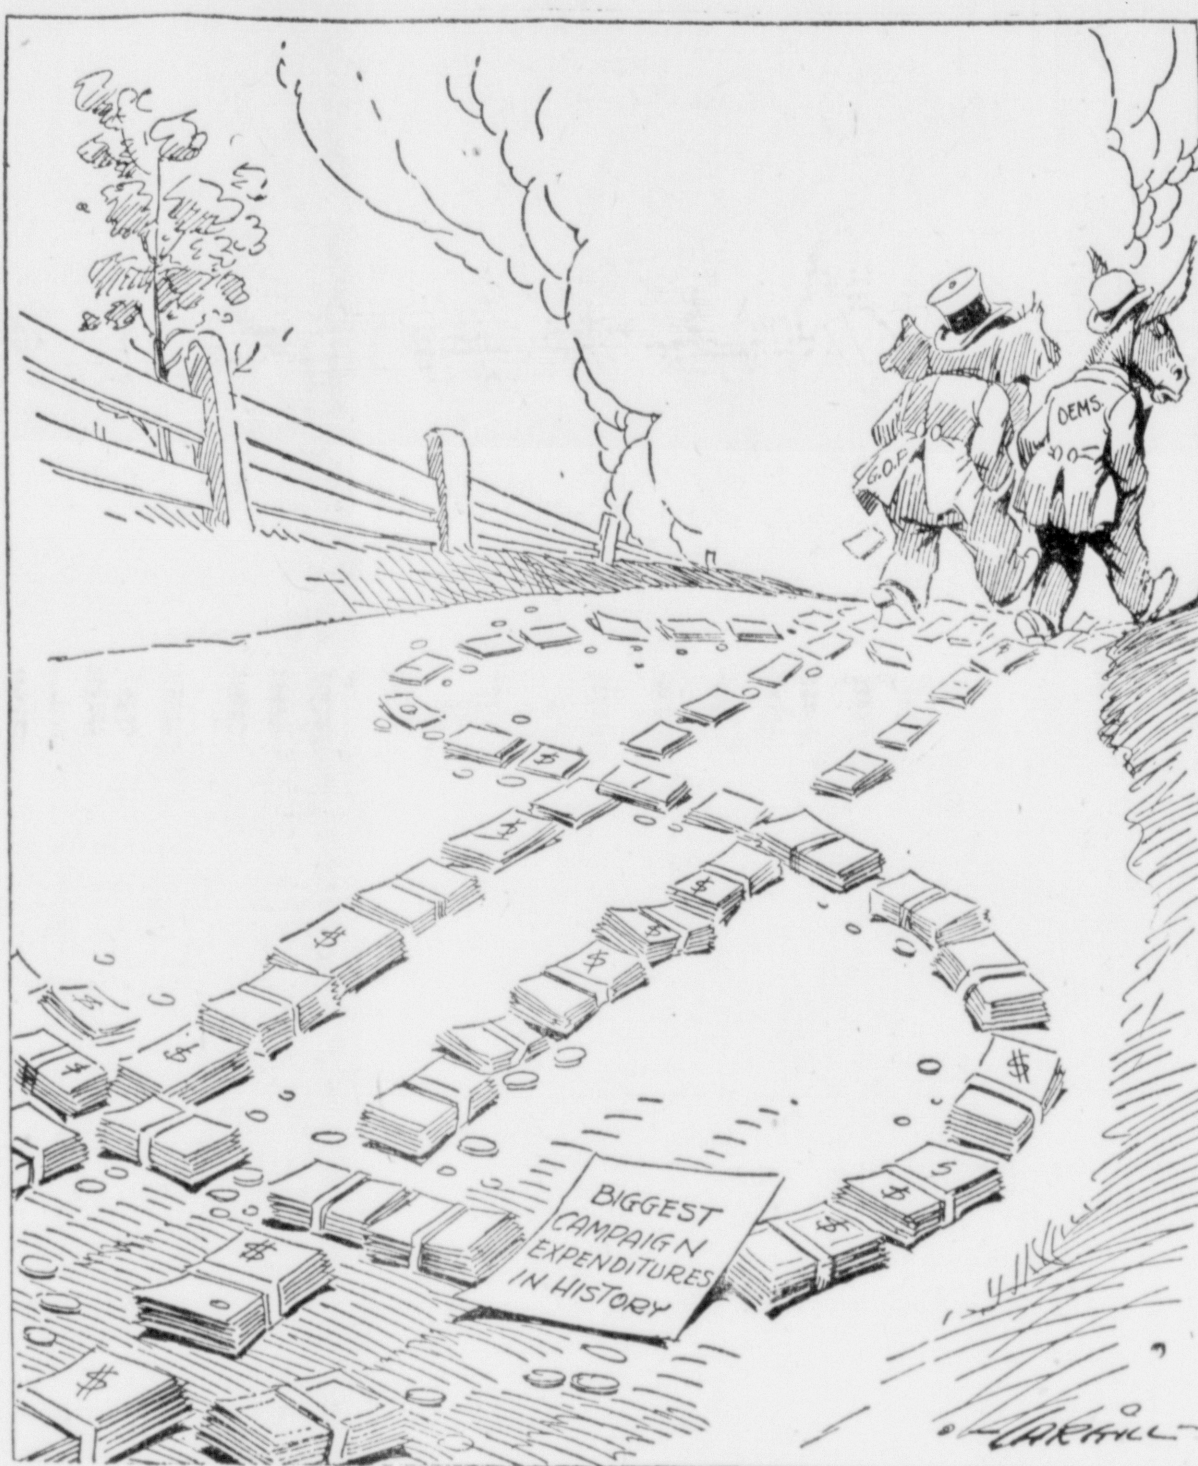

Peppers Stuffed With Creamed Celery—The outside stalks of celery are diced and cooked in a very little water until tender. The peppers are boiled about ten minutes after stems and seeds are removed. A white sauce is made for the celery, and the pepper shells are filled with this creamed mixture. Grated cheese is put on the top and they are put under the broiler flame for two or three minutes or baked in a hot oven until the cheese melts.

Baked Apples—Wash and core four apples. With a sharp knife cut a line through the skin around the middle of each apple. This will prevent the skin bursting as the apples cook. Allow a quarter of a cupful of sugar mixed with a quarter of a teaspoonful of cinnamon to five apples. Fill the cavities with this mixture, place in a baking dish and cover the bottom of the dish with hot water. Bake in a hot oven, basting occasionally with the syrup. More water may be added as needed. Apples may be "baked" on top of the stove by placing in a covered dripping pan and cooking slowly, basting occasionally. Corn syrup used instead of sugar produces a glazed appearance. Raisins and nuts may be used to stuff the cavities of the apples. In this case mix the sugar and water and pour over the apples.

Finnan Haddie a la Delmonico (Mrs. Mary Morton's Daily Tested Recipe.)

Make a cream sauce of milk and flour and stir into it the beaten yolk of an egg. Pick the fish into small pieces and brown in a tablespoon of melted butter, then add to the sauce in the chafin dish. Just before serving add a teaspoon of grated cheese and a hard boiled egg, the yolk of which has been grated and white cut into small pieces. Season with red pepper and salt to taste. Serve over toast. This may also be baked in a roasting pan with a slight covering of crumbs over the top.

HOME AGAIN, HOME AGAIN, JOG, JOG, JOG!

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—Congress is behaving with rank injustice, and defying the constitution like the veriest bootlegger, in neglecting to take over the house of representatives so as to give more members to states which have grown rapidly in recent years.

We all know why. What some states are entitled to gain, others must lose. The latter block any change.

The constitution requires one after each census—once every decade. The last one was on the 1910 basis. The 1920 census was ignored. Prospects are that 1930's will be ignored, too.

The validity of this year's presidential election is open to attack, due to congress' unconstitutional course, for the electoral college is chosen on the basis of the states' congressional representation, and the congressional representation of at least 19 of them is all wrong.

On a population basis California, Connecticut, Michigan, New Jersey, North Carolina, Ohio, Texas and Washington, among them, are denied a dozen electors they ought to have. Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Mississippi, Missouri, Nebraska, Rhode Island and Vermont are allowed a dozen too many.

Expert estimates forecast twice as gross an inequality under the 1930 census as at present if congress still balks.

Obviously such delay in a congressional reapportionment is most unfair.

Nevertheless, even if and when made, it will not do all toward righting the wrongs that certain of the present situation's victims expect.

The theory is that the last few years' tremendous increase in the country's urban population is what has upset the balance of representation, and that, with a reapportionment, the big cities will gain control in Washington. The fact is, although congress fixes the number of each state's national representatives, the various state legislatures divide them up by districts (city and country) to suit themselves.

Now most of our big cities have long groaned under the domination of rural legislatures.

The cityward trend in America's population, had fairly begun throughout the United States between 1910 and 1920, probably have misled city dwellers into imagining themselves a more formidable bloc than they really are.

The 1920 urban majority was only 51.4 per cent.

To be sure, it is larger now. But it must be remembered that the census bureau classes every population center over 2,500 as a city.

The truth is that census figures, indicating a change from a rural to an urban majority throughout the United States between 1910 and 1920, probably have misled city dwellers into imagining themselves a more formidable bloc than they really are.

The 1920 urban majority was only 51.4 per cent.

To be sure, it is larger now. But it must be remembered that the census bureau classes every population center over 2,500 as a city.

It is doubtful if the average inhabitant of a city of only 2,500—or even a great deal more than that—is not more essentially rural than urban.

Genuine city sympathies probably are not very generally to be found in places much under 100,000.

If we count that as a minimum our urban population is little above one-fourth our total.

How to Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

Arms, Wrists and Hands

Pretty arms are almost necessities to the modern young woman who is constantly faced and regrettably phased by the command of fashion for sleeveless gowns.

We realize that our arms are not merely useful appendages, but very important and significant beauty attributes. On the condition of arms, elbows, wrists and hands will very often depend the success of an entire costume.

Before I go into the arm exercise which my little promises, let me tell you again about the correct care of the skin of arms and elbows. Perhaps I've told you this story before, but it brings up a point so often overlooked, that I cannot help but feel it is well worth repeating.

In Paris, there is an objectionable phrase to be heard at some of the leading couturiers. It is "the American elbow." American women, I'm sorry to say, have earned this appellation by the distressing elbow condition to be seen on the average woman who goes over there to be clothed. Look honestly and frankly into your mirror now. Have you the "American elbow"? If you haven't, don't run any risks. And if you have, correct it by all means, and at once. Either the twice a day regular use of cleansing cream or the daily use of a penetrating grainy washing preparation will rapidly correct an unlovely elbow. Then, when you have restored its softness and roundness, protect it by putting in a little balm or a rich cream at least twice a day. You will soon have elbows to be proud of!

Another unpleasant and unlovely arm affliction is goose pimples. The best way to correct this is through the friction obtained by the scientific, grainy preparation I have above mentioned, finished off with cold water and a good rub with a coarse towel.

Once a week try taking an arm rubdown with common table salt, before your morning cleansing. Follow this with a light application of cleansing cream, or else your skin will become dry and irritated.

Now for the exercises. For hands, wrists and forearms.

Kellygrams

By FRED C. KELLY

Why is it, I once heard somebody ask, that the people one meets when camping in the woods are almost invariably pleasant folk who put on no airs?

There is probably a simple explanation of this. One doesn't meet four-flushers in the woods because no four-flusher is likely to go there. Or if he did he wouldn't tarry long. He would have little to gain by being in the woods. Once he gets away from an artificial city background, he is obliged to show goods. If he boasts about his swimming prowess, or his ability in a canoe, he is sure to have an opportunity to prove just what he can do.

Big talk, like expensive jewelry, may impress a head waiter in a flashy restaurant, but on a camping trip it only serves to make one ridiculous.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Ripe grapes are best for grape juice; under-ripe grapes for jelly.

Make the child's winter dresses of washable wool material such as flannel or challie.

Baked Bananas—Bake bananas in the skins in a moderate oven until they become dark in color and soft to the touch. Remove from the skins and sprinkle with granulated sugar and a few drops of lemon juice to each banana. Serve hot as a dessert. Green bananas may be baked and served without sugar and lemon to take the place of potatoes.

1. Stretch both arms out in front of you, and open all your fingers as wide and far apart as possible. Then slowly clench your fists. Relax and then repeat eight or ten times.

2. Hold your arms outstretched, palms facing inward. Slowly draw the fingers together and twist the wrists so that the backs of your hands face each other. Repeat eight times.

3. Place hands on shoulders, elbows at sides. Throw the forearms outward to shoulder level. Repeat very slowly eight times.

4. Stand erect, arms at sides, fists clenched. Take a deep, slow breath and raise your arms overhead and above your head. Do the movement slowly as though you were burdened with heavy weights. Stretch so that you can feel a tension in all of the arm muscles involved.

5. Stand erect, holding a short stick with both hands in front of your body, parallel with the floor. Raise the stick slowly above your head. Bring the stick down in back of your shoulders, elbows bent. Exhale as you raise the stick above your head, returning to original position. Repeat eight times.

6. Stretch both arms out in front at shoulder level. Bend your elbows, drawing the arms back briskly while inhaling. Stretch the arms forward rapidly while exhaling. Repeat ten times.

7. Place hands on shoulders, upper arms extended at shoulder level. Fling the forearms out straight, inhaling. Raise hands to shoulders again, exhaling. Repeat ten times.

ADVISED TO EXERCISE.
REDUCE SLOWLY

Should a Great-Grandmother Reduce?

"I am 80 years old, 5 feet 6-1-2 inches tall, and weigh 180. My arms and legs are not at all fat. All my excess is on my hips and stomach. I enjoy what might be called perfect health. I sleep excellently and can hear and see as well as anyone. Have no rheumatism, never have a backache or pain anywhere. But I haven't the figure I fancy, even at 80—and a great-grandmother! I've spent my summers in France for a number of years, with my daughters, and I think no more of crossing the ocean than of going to New York."

"About 10 years ago I gave up meat, and later tea and coffee. My diet is mostly vegetables, fruits, whole wheat bread and milk. I eat very little, less than half the quantity that ordinary people do, and especially eat lightly at night. I do not walk so much as I would if I did not have so much to carry. I fear you will smile at all this, but I hope you have the key to unlock what I have so far found closed."

"MRS. S." is a smile of happiness, to realize that one can live to your age, be in almost perfect health, and have possession of all the mental faculties, including the desire to look one's best. It is apparently only your excess weight that puts you out of the perfect health class.

It is normal, and therefore right that you should eat very lightly, for the food requirements are materially lessened in old age. A little too much bread and butter, and the only suggestion I can make is to cut these down. I wouldn't try to increase your exercises, and I wouldn't try to lose more than one-half to three-quarters of a pound a week. And

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

GIRL WHO PUTS ON AIRS
NO FAVORITE WITH MATES

A short time ago I printed a letter from a high school girl who said she did not make friends easily and was generally left out of the school doings. She wondered why the young people who seemed friendly enough at school did not ask her to go with them to class rallies, etc. Now one of the readers of this column has written telling about girl she knows who is generally ignored, giving the reasons. I do not think Molly, my little former correspondent, is in the class with this girl, but it might explain why some are not popular, and it could be as well to check up on ourselves and see if, even in private, charges brought against this girl could possibly apply to us.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: It was with genuine interest that I read the complaint of 'Molly,' who claims she cannot make friends, and that her schoolmates do not ask her out with them. I will avail myself of the invitation you made for 'help from your readers' and think that perhaps the following may be of interest to quite a few."

"I am employed in the office of one of the largest life insurance companies in the country and come into contact with many girls and young men. In our department there is one young girl who is quiet in manner, pleasing features, neatly dressed and steady friends either with girls or boys. The trouble is that she thinks too much of herself. She considers herself above the average run of office girls and never makes an opportunity to call attention to her accomplishments. The young lady never starts an argument—possibly because she cares to argue with her because she always considers her opinion final and infallible. A whatever matter she designs a bestow her consideration."

"If anyone asks her out she talks and talks and expresses her own opinions and the other fellow gets no chance at all. If she is asked to a party she is ever on the lookout to call the hostess' attention to error made in the games, cutting in for prizes, etc. And it is small wonder that the crowd prefers to leave her out of their invitation list. She seems to be afflicted with halitosis almost constantly, and once when I broached the subject to her in the most tactful way I could think of, all she thanks I got for it was, 'Well, there must be something wrong with your nose; there's nothing like that coming with me.' So, Mrs. Lee, you not think that the chief cause of this girl being ostracized is that false pride of hers?"

Undoubtedly, for you have sketched a word picture of a most unpleasant young person. Observe, I don't believe "Molly" is like that. I think her principal trouble is shyness and lack of experience, but a good many of us may look at the picture as presented by you and take a hint. Thank you for your interesting letter. It was too long to print in its entirety."

Sally: Don't try to take a man away from another woman who cares for him. Put yourself in her place and think how you would feel under the circumstances. If he wants to correspond he will ask you if he may write. And under the circumstances I don't think a gift before eyes would be in very good taste."

Brown Eyes: I think if the really loves you he will seek you company and so cut others out. Not just act silly with other girls. Don't you think so? I'd have other boy friends and a good time, only be friendly and pleasant with this boy so as to show him that you like him.

Peter's Adventure

A VOTE OF THANKS

"So am I!" cried Peter. "Mrs. Rabbit, you have made me famous by finding the sun was warm and the air delicious—in fact, it was exactly the sort of afternoon to take a nap."

"Let's give them a vote of thanks—they'll hear it, I guess."

"It was sort of mean to find fault with them after they'd been so good to us!" muttered Sonny-Bunny. "There, let's not talk about it any more. The afternoon is still young. How about taking a trip to the cabbage patch, mother? I am as hungry as a fox. Perhaps we can find some carrots to take home to dad."

"Two for yourself, my son and one for your father," laughed me Mrs. Gray Rabbit. "However, I will go with you, if you wish me to. I have quite an appetite myself, come to think of it. Goodby, boy. Come and visit the Rabbit Hole whenever you are lonely and don't know what else to do; Sonny-Bunny and I will try to make it pleasant for you."

"You bet we will," agreed the little rabbit heartily. "Come on, mother, some of the folks may have gotten there first and nibbled off all the choice leaves." Pulling at her long ear, Sonny-Bunny tried to drag his mother away, and seeing how patient her small son was, Mrs. Gray Rabbit went with him.

Peter was left alone with the dozing Bobolinks, and there seemed nothing left for him to do but to take a nap himself. Now that he thought about it, the sun was warm and the air delicious—in fact, it was exactly the sort of afternoon to take a nap.

Why had he blamed the Bobolinks?

Peter stretched himself out on the soft grass, pulled his eyes over his eyes for a screen from the sun and any passing insect that might take a notion to alight on his nose and soon was sound asleep.

Central Wins League Contest From Troy High 6 To 0

BUCCANEERS FORCE TROJANS TO WALK GANG PLANK ON THURSDAY

Large "Equipment Day" Crowd Sees Tilt: Visitors Outplay Locals On Paper But Xenia Defense Stops Scoring Attack.

XENIA CENTRAL High School's Buccaneers, undefeated in the Miami Valley League this season, disclosed a scoring punch that has been lacking in preceding games and celebrated "Equipment Day" by downing Troy High 6 to 0 before the largest crowd of the season at Cox Memorial Athletic Field Thursday afternoon.

The victory kept unblemished Xenia's record of no defeats in the league with one more league encounter remaining on the schedule.

For the first time this season the Buccaneers exhibited a powerful driving attack late in the first and early in the second periods, Scurry, colored halfback, plunging across the goal line for the only marker of the game in the second quarter following an uninterrupted march down the field when began on Xenia's thirty-five-yard line. His place kick for extra point was blocked but no one cared.

Xenia could gain little through the line and only tried two passes, but it was when Scurry started around end, protected by fine interference, that the Buccaneers added the yardage in large proportions.

Sweeping end runs which accounted for five first downs in a row featured Xenia's parade for the line marker of the game, starting on the thirty-five yard mark. Bell rounded right end for nine yards and Scurry turned the other flank for three and first down. Buell slipped off tackle for two and Scurry circled right end for nineteen yards to the Troy thirty-four.

Scurry ran the ends three times in succession to advance the ball to the twenty-three. Buell picked up two at guard as the first quarter ended. After changing positions, the Blue and White took up the task where it had left off, Buell adding another first down with a nine-yard run off tackle.

With the ball on the eleven, Xenia sustained an attack for a change. Scurry and Buell were stopped and just when it seemed that the opportunity was gone Scurry dodged around end for seven yards, barely making first down on the two-yard line. Buell shot off tackle for one yard and Scurry lunged over on the next line play.

After that Xenia was content to rest on its laurels and set about to protect its advantage, accomplishing that feat but not without difficulty.

The Trojans had several chances to score, twice penetrating deep into Xenia territory in the first half, but always unable to sustain an attack when the goal line neared.

Scurry after the game began, off tackle smashes and end runs by Penny and Captain Hayner brought Troy to the Xenia twenty-five yard stripe, but the Xenia forward wall, which often during the game resembled a sieve in mid-field, stiffened when a sound-down threatened and the ball changed hands after four line plunges were rewarded by only nine yards.

The line punting of Scurry kept the Troy threat away from the Xenia goal during most of the game. His advantage over Eyer in this department largely nullified the Trojan gains.

Troy played stubbornly on the defense and repelled brilliantly on offense but the amazing success of repeated end runs by Scurry and Buell were too much for the visitors to cope with.

During the remainder of the contest there were some threats from time to time by both teams but something always turned up to stop a score.

In a line so strong as Xenia showed Thursday individual prowess in the shaded somewhat but Smith, Scott and Gibney were invincible at center and the two tackle positions. On offensive Captain Hayner, Troy quarterback, was the best ground gainer of the afternoon.

Hayner carried the ball twenty-three times and gained eighty-nine yards from scrimmage, losing six yards. He averaged four yards every time he toted the pigskin. Penny, halfback, was the other overworked member of the Troy backfield, carrying the ball twenty-two times for a total of seventy-two yards, an average of three and one-half yards. Eyer gained sixteen yards on eight attempts. Raymond nine yards on two attempts and Ross two yards on one effort. Ahead lost four yards on his only attempt. Penny was a great line plunger, seldom failing to gain more or less than three or four yards.

For Xenia Scurry was easily the offensive star. The Xenia half accounted for seventy yards, carrying the ball sixteen times. He lost eighteen yards. Buell averaged three and one-half yards every time, gaining thirty-five yards on ten chances. Buell also performed well and on fourteen line plunges or end runs he contributed thirty yards. Admir only carried the ball himself four times but gained thirteen yards. Xenia's superiority over the Trojans is not manifest so much by statistics of the game, but in the end points count more than anything else.

Troy registered twelve first downs to eight for Xenia, tallying two in the first quarter, five in the second, one in the third and four in the fourth period, two in the second and third and none in the last quarter as the local eleven was on the defensive most of the time.

Troy gained forty more yards from scrimmage than Xenia. On fifty-seven attempts at rushing the ball, Troy backs gained an average of 188 yards against 148 for Xenia on forty-five attempts. The average, however, is in Xenia's favor. Xenia lost twenty-two yards and Troy ten from scrimmage.

Neither team uncovered an effective forward passing game at

LANGS WILL TACKLE T. AND P. CLEANERS SUNDAY AFTERNOON

The Lang Chevrolet, fresh from a 20 to 0 victory over the strong West Alexandria Ex-Hi team, will try to make it two in a row when they meet the T. and P. Cleaners of Dayton Sunday afternoon at Cincinnati Ave. Park.

The T. and P. outfit has lost but one game this season, that being to the Tritons of West Carrollton by a 30 to 0 score. It must be remembered that the Tritons have a good club and really are a pro club and not semi-pro. Lou Partlow, former Triangle fullback, is playing the T. and P. position for the Triton outfit. Bud Graham, another Triangle star, is playing one of the halves.

With these two athletes the West Carrollton outfit ran wild over the T. and P. team. The Cleaners won from West Milton by a 6 to 0 score while they played a 13 to 13 tie with the strong Dayton Keesslers at Springfield by a 7 to 0 score. The Cleaners have scored twenty-six points and all have come by the use of the forward pass. In Flynn, half-back and Stevens, quarter, they have a good passing combination.

The Lang outfit is a bit weak on forward passing. It lost to Springfield when the Bulldogs completed two passes, both of which went for scores. Last week West Alex completed five passes for good gains. The locals will have to muster a good defense for forward passing or they are liable to come out on the short end Sunday against the T. and P. bunch. Lou McCoy, veteran line man, will be back in the lineup after an absence of several weeks. Joe "Red" Anderson, fleet-footed half, and Harry Smith, giant fullback and line plunger, are tied in the matter of touchdowns scored at four apiece. Perrine is next with three touchdowns. All the players are in good shape and went through a stiff signal drill Thursday evening. The probable lineup:

Lang Chevrolet—Peters or Purdon, ls. Beals, ls. Bales, ls. Leppard or McCoy, ls. Houk, rg. Halder, rt. Doak, re. F. Smith or Beal, qb. Anderson, lb. McKeever, rb. H. Smith, fb.

T. and P. Cleaners—Forbhe, ls. E. Yike, ls. Harris, ls. Mitchell, ls. Brill, rg. A. Yike, rt. Coleman, re. Stevens, qb. Haines, lb. Flynn, rb. Rex, fb.

WILBERFORCE IN KENTUCKY: ANTIOCH ENGAGES RIO GRANDE

Wilberforce University's earnest if ineffective football team will go out of the state to meet Kentucky State College at Frankfort, Ky., Saturday afternoon.

Wilberforce now has won but one game in five tries, has been tied three times and has been beaten once, in the opening game by two points. Wilberforce and its opponents have scored forty-four points together in the five games. Antioch College's Division "B" football team, beaten decisively in its first two games, will wind up the Antioch football season against Rio Grande College at Yellow Springs Saturday afternoon, hoping only to make a good showing.

Outside of that, the only football game worthy of mention is the Cedarville College-Wilmington College return game at Cedarville Friday afternoon.

Bowling

Bowling in better form than usual, the McDowell and Torrence Lumber Co. quintet made a clean sweep of the three-game series with the Lang Transfers in a Recreation League match Thursday night, ending the second round of league play. Bertram led the winners with a three-game total of 574. Highley topped the losers with 560. Box score:

COMMUNITY CHE ST QUOTA FIXED AT $7,000 AT BUDGET MEETING

The quota to be raised at Xenia's first Community Chest drive November 20 to 27, inclusive, has been tentatively fixed at at least $7,000, it was disclosed at the first meeting of the budget committee Thursday night when seven charitable organizations of the city which will benefit by the campaign presented their itemized budgets for next year.

The budget committee, headed by Postmaster C. S. Frazer as chairman, approved several of the 1929 budgets as submitted and in other cases worked diligently to cut appropriations.

The following allowances were decided upon by the committee and will be forwarded to the chest board of directors for consideration: Boy Scout work, $500; recreation fund, $200; chest drive expense, $300; Xenia Garden Club, $200; Greene County Health League, $500; Federated Parent-Teacher Association for three months of next year, $300; Social Service League, $3,500; Red Cross, $1,500.

It is pointed out that the P.T.A. organization has already conducted its yearly drive for funds and will have sufficient money with which to function for nine months of next year. As a result, a budget of $300 was allowed the P.T.A. for the months of September, October and November of 1929.

Merger of the executive offices of the Social Service League and the Red Cross also will enable the chest officials to cut the usual appropriations of these two charities almost in half for 1929. The merger is planned to take effect January 1, it is announced.

Officials in charge of the drive are optimistic of its success since the one campaign will make unnecessary separate drives for funds by the various charity organizations during the year.

Plans for publicity boosting the drive were discussed by the executive committee at a noon luncheon Thursday. Literature will be distributed as soon as possible and it is disclosed that advertising for automobiles is also being prepared.

According to present plans, brief talks boosting the campaign will be commenced at local theaters probably Saturday. These talks will be made by prominent Xenians.

Next Sunday it is expected that the drive will be announced in all local churches.

The budget committee which considered the budgets of the various organizations that have been invited to participate in the drive is composed of Postmaster C. S. Frazer, chairman; Miss Sarah Hagler, Mrs. Foster Clemmer, M. L. Wolf, J. C. Marshall, H. S. Leonard and R. D. Adair.

With articles of affiliation approved by both bodies, the merger of the Social Service League and the Greene County Red Cross Chapter will become effective January 1.

Details of the consolidation of the two offices have not been worked out, it was announced Friday. It has not been decided where headquarters will be maintained, or the employment of a secretary and other matters.

The decision to merge the two organizations was made this summer, but the definite arrangements have been taken up at various meetings of the two bodies.

HOPPE SPARED BY RULING OF TURNER

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 9.—The State Board of Clemency today refused to recommend executive clemency for Charles Hoppe, Toledo can-fitter, condemned to die for the murder of 7-year-old Dorothy Szelagowski of Toledo.

Hoppe was scheduled to die tonight but Attorney General Edward C. Turner earlier today ruled that he cannot be executed while he has a petition for review pending. The petition was filed Wednesday and supreme court does not convene until next Tuesday.

If the court denies Hoppe a review it must then set a new date for execution, and only Governor Vic Donahey, through the extension of executive clemency, could save him from death.

The governor, in the past has been governed by recommendations of the Clemency Board and since the board refused a favorable recommendation Hoppe undoubtedly will die.

his motor car was attached for unpaid bills, and several other suits rising from unpaid accounts were started.

In 1924 he was sentenced to two months imprisonment in Paris and fined 200 francs because of removing personal property which had been attached to satisfy a London tailor bill. The prince at that time could not be found.

He is believed to have spent most of his recent time either in southern France or Egypt.

BIGGER & BETTER

CHEVROLET

THE LANG CHEVROLET CO.

There are now 6,000,000 Christians in India including Protestants and Catholics.

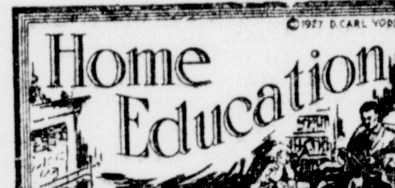

A quarter of a million dollars has been raised in America for the relief of famine in China. John Earl Baker, experienced in relief administration is in China investigating the need of additional funds.

The world's record to date for printing the longest serial story goes to the New Era, a weekly newspaper in Parker, South Dakota, which has been running for the past twenty-two years in installments the Holy Bible. It has just recently been completed.

The Archbishop of Canterbury is the first Primate in England to resign that high office. The resignation takes effect November 12th and marks the completion of the Archbishop's twenty-fifth year of service in that capacity. His eightieth birthday as well as the day he celebrates his golden wedding.

The Westminster Choir of Dayton, Ohio, is planning to undertake a European tour next spring, appearing among other places at the Vienna Opera, the Mecca of all ambitious musicians. This will be the first time an American choir ever appeared in this famous institution. There will be six concerts given in England, nine in France, fifteen in Germany and later twelve in Scandinavia.

One of the treasures of the Lepers Colony at Palo Seco, Panama, is a huge brass horn belonging to the leper band of the gift of the delegates to last year's Episcopal Synod of the Fourth Province which includes the Canal Zone. The whole band of nine pieces is a source of pride and joy to the hundred or more lepers.

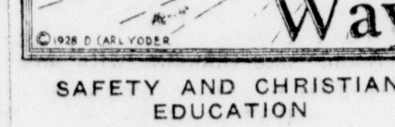

GET AWAY FROM THE CROWD

Robert Burdette in a talk to a young man said, "Get away from the crowd awhile and think. Stand on one side and let the world go by while you get acquainted with yourself and see what kind of a fellow you are."

"Ask yourself hard questions about yourself. Ascertain from original sources if you are really the man you say you are and if you are always honest; if you always tell the square, perfect truth in business details; if your life is good and upright at 11 o'clock at night as it is at noon."

"Study yourself to know if you are as just as good when you go to the city as you are at home; if you are the sort of man your father hopes you are and your sweet heart believes you are."

Get on intimate terms with yourself and every time you come out of one of those private interviews you will be a stronger, better man, D. Carl Yoder.

SAFETY AND CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

Roger Babson says, "The need of the hour is not for more factories or materials, not for more railroads or steamships, not for more armies or navies, but rather for more education based on the plain teaching of Jesus."

"We are willing to give our property and even our lives when our country calls in time of war. Yet the call of Christian education is today of even greater importance than was ever the call of the army or navy. I say this because we shall probably never live to see America attacked from without but we may at any time see our best institutions attacked from within."

"The safety of our sons and daughters as they go out on the streets this very night is due to the influence of preachers and teachers rather than to the influence of policemen and lawmakers. Yes, the safety of our nation, including all groups, depends on Christian education."

What are the best fifteen novels recommended by good authority as safe and helpful for young people to read?

The British Weekly lately published a list of fifteen of the best novels; this list has been reviewed by leading American religious leaders who have acquiesced in the selection. These books are "Esmond" by Trueman; "The Cloister and the Hearth" by Charles Reade; "Conqueror" by George Sand; "The Brothers Karamazov" by Dostoevsky; "A Russian Gentleman" by Serge Akakoff; "Lorna Doone" by Blackmore; "Green Mansions" by W. H. Hudson; "The Midget" by W. Dela Mare; "The Wind in the Willows" by Kenneth Grahame; "The Green Mirror" by Hugh Walpole; "The Life of a Simple Man" by Emile Zola; "The Priory of St. Winifred" by Henry Ryecroft; "The Old Wives Tale" by Arnold Bennett.

2. What reform is greatly needed in the majority of Protestant churches?

A leading editor of a church paper declares a reform needs to be introduced that will relieve the pastor of the work of the church that can and ought to be done by the laymen giving him more time for study and preparation of messages that will make the church service so worth while that the people cannot afford to be absent.

Some of the work that laymen might do is the work pertaining to the finances, advertising, business administration, building management, directing and caring for the recreational and social programs of the church and doing much of the pastoral work in visiting the parish.

3. How can faith and piety be kept sweet and fresh?

What causes prejudice? What is fanaticism?

How shall we get people to know people?

4. To what extent did Paul abandon and in what points did he keep the system of Moses?

5. Who are those today who despise the name "Christian" and why?

Clericus quotes the following as the heart of the lesson:

"Let me live in a house by the side of the road, where the race of men go by."

The men who are bad, the men who are good, as good and as bad as I."

I would not sit in the scorners seat or hurl the cynic's ban; Let me live in a house by the side of the road and be a friend to man."

LESSON PRAYER

Dear Lord, grant that Paul's glorious experiences may stimulate our own Christian courage. May we too live in such obedience to conscience that we can make Paul's confident assertion of an upright life.

BOOK REVIEW

"Principles of Religious Education," by Earl P. Emme and Paul Stevick, the MacMillan Co., New York, is just a statement of principles not a detailed discussion of particular methods nor of particular types of organization. It brings together the bearing of the most important findings of scientific study upon the religious educative process.

"Around the Camp Fire with the Older Boys," by Margaret Eggleston, Doubleday, Doran Company, New York City is designed to meet the need of the many busy teachers of boys who do not know where to find a story that will help to teach a certain ideal. These are real stories of real boys.

SAFETY AND CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

Roger Rabson says: "The need of the race is not for more factories or materials, nor for more railroads or steamships, nor for more armies or navies, but rather for more education based on the plain teaching of Jesus."

"We are willing to give our property and even our lives when our country calls in time of war. Yet the call of Christian education is today of even greater importance than was ever the call of the army or navy. I say this because we shall probably never live to see America attacked from without but we may at any time see our best institutions attacked from within."

"The safety of our sons and daughters as they go out on the streets this very night is due to the influence of preachers and teachers rather than to the influence of policemen and lawmakers. Yes, the safety of our nation, including all groups depends on Christian education."

The Little Yellow House

By BEATRICE BURTON -- RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSN. ©1928

"If I had money I would be one of them."

READ THIS FIRST:

The little yellow house never showed its true dinginess, because Mrs. Milburn refused to let anyone see it. Her love transformed it to a shining palace where sacrificing devotion made everything out of nothing. Emmy, the only daughter, weary of a hum drum street and Robb Hollis, the boy who lived there, and who had always loved her, excited by the attentions the wealthy man she worked for showered upon her, decides to rent a tiny apartment of her own, where her friends, can see her. Wells is anxious to meet Emmy's mother, and she decides reluctantly to take him down to Flower street.

Wells Harbison commences to make love to Emmy. On payday Emmy is surprised at a raise. She goes to the cashier and he tells her it is for good speaking. Wells persuades her to take up music lessons.

Emmy rents a baby grand piano at Wells' insistence. He tells her she can pay him back when she becomes a great singer.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XLVI

Harbison sent her a small marble copy of the Winged Victory of Samothrace to set upon it, because, so he said, no baby grand piano was complete without one.

"That," Emmy told him, with her winged smile that robbed her words of even a tiny sting, "is the only silly thing I ever heard you say. A piano isn't a table for statuary and vases. It's a delicate instrument, and shouldn't be cluttered up with things that rattle and dance while it's being played, any more than a violin should be used as a tea tray."

But she set the Winged Victory on the table between the windows, where it stood in all its proud beauty and was an inspiration to her while she practiced her scales and exercises. She could imagine herself standing on the edge of a concert stage as proudly as it one had stood looking out over some ancient battlefield or over some once-famous harbor filled with wooden ships.

Harbison kept sending presents to her. Flowers every day, boxes of glazed nuts and fruits, magazines, a green enamel cigarette box, a silver tea kettle with a spirit lamp under it that burned with a blue flame and gave a touch of cozy luxury to her table.

"I ought to be having Marianna and her crowd in for lunch or tea pretty soon," she kept saying to herself. But somehow or other there seemed to be very little room for anyone but Wells Harbison in her life these days. As he, himself, said, he camped upon her doorstep morning, noon, and night.

She caught her breath over that thought, so daring was it.

"But I'm not," she told herself. "I'm nothing but a working woman, even if I am Marianna's cousin, and I'd better try to remember it and be sensible."

She gave herself a mental shaking and tried to forget the whole happening in an hour's hard practicing. But she could not forget it. She was so hurt that her heart seemed actually to ache in her breast. And when she finished the chicken sandwiches that night before she went to bed they were like seaweed and dead sea fruit in her mouth. She had not realized herself, until then, how much she had counted upon that tea and upon the friendship and recognition of "her own kind of people."

One night she came home from the office to find Mrs. Milburn waiting for her in the tiny hall at the head of the stairs. She was in her widow's weeds that had been Grandmother Pentland's weeds years and years before, and she was sitting on the top step of the stairs holding her Thomas a Kempis in her black-gloved hands.

"Well, how's my big girl?" she greeted her, jumping up with that amazing lightness of hers.

She followed Emmy into the room that overlooked the park, and stood, with her little shoulders against the door, gazing around its walls. Her eyes were very wide.

In the late afternoon sunlight the place had an unmistakable air of luxury, with fresh yellow roses on the table, the tea tray with the silver kettle gleaming on it, the radio, the baby-grand piano with its Spanish shawl, the costly cigarette box and ash trays of Chinese enamel that had been gifts of time.

"My goodness me, Emmy! How much do you have to pay for this place?" she asked. "It seems very elegant to me."

Feeling extremely guilty, and as if she had something to hide, Emmy told her how much rent she paid.

"I don't see how they let you have it for that much money. It's very grand," Mrs. Milburn answered her, shaking her head doubtfully.

Her eyes went to the three volumes of Wells Harbison's Jean Christophe that lay upon the table near the bowl of yellow roses. She picked one of them up.

"What books are these?" she wanted to know. She was always interested in books. "Are they written in French, for goodness sake?"

She opened it to find out, and came upon Harbison's name written upon the fly leaf. Her mouth tightened at its tender corners.

"Do you see a great deal of this man—this Mr. Harbison, Emmy?" she asked, tapping the page with her fingers.

Toward the end of her first month in the flat she telephoned to ask Marianna, Cassie Sears, and little Lovey, to come for tea, and a four-piece of bridge on a Saturday afternoon. She invited them on a Tuesday, and all three of them said that they could come. On Saturday she spent a third of the contents of her pay envelope on a lace-edged cloth for the table, on chicken sandwiches and French pastry from the smartest tea room in the city, and on two new decks of cards and a bridge score.

She rushed home, dusted her little living room, borrowed a card table from the manager of the building, and was all dressed for her guests at half-past three.

But they did not come.

At five minutes after four the telephone rang, and Marianna's voice at the other end of the wire said, apologetically, that all three of them were miles away at the Pleasant Valley Country Club.

"Even if we started this minute, we couldn't get to your house in much less than an hour and a half, so there's not much use in our starting at all," she said. "We've been learning that new game of Badminton down here, and this afternoon slipped away before we realized it. Cassie and Lovey want me to tell you how sorry they are not to be able to see you, darling, and we do hope you're not disappointed. Ask us again, won't you? And better luck next time."

Emmy sighed as she hung up the receiver upon the sound of the gay, light voice. It came to her with the force of a blow that she had no part in the lives of those three people who represented "her own kind." She was still an outsider, so far as they were concerned, in spite of her deliverance from Flower Street and the little yellow house. They had their own life—their bridge, their Badminton, their parties—and she had hers. And that was the beginning and the end of it.

"If I had money I would be one of them," she thought, with some bitterness, as she sat down alone to eat the little cakes and some of the sandwiches. "If I had their kind of clothes and cars and houses, and things would be smooth sailing for me. But family doesn't count for much if you don't have the money to back it up, and I haven't. Now, if I were married to a man like Wells Harbison—"

She caught her breath over that thought, so daring was it.

"But I'm not," she told herself. "I'm nothing but a working woman, even if I am Marianna's cousin, and I'd better try to remember it and be sensible."

She gave herself a mental shaking and tried to forget the whole happening in an hour's hard practicing. But she could not forget it. She was so hurt that her heart seemed actually to ache in her breast. And when she finished the chicken sandwiches that night before she went to bed they were like seaweed and dead sea fruit in her mouth. She had not realized herself, until then, how much she had counted upon that tea and upon the friendship and recognition of "her own kind of people."

She opened it to find out, and came upon Harbison's name written upon the fly leaf. Her mouth tightened at its tender corners.

"Do you see a great deal of this man—this Mr. Harbison, Emmy?" she asked, tapping the page with her fingers.

Emmy nodded her pretty head. "I do, she said, quietly.

The old look of anxiety and dismay came into her mother's face for a moment. "I knew it was that when you didn't come home to us for supper once or twice a week, as you promised you would," she said, and then: "I think you'd better give up all this"—her glance swept the room—"and come home to live, even if home isn't the Crystal Palace, I'm unapologetic about you, living here alone, with this man you work for coming here to see you. I don't like it."

Her eyes had found Harbison's pipe, and his blue tin of tobacco in their place on the window sill.

Emmy threw her chin up defiantly. "There's not a reason on earth why he shouldn't come here," she said. "We're free agents, both of us, and he's just the finest kind of man, Mother. He's given me a raise in my salary so I can go on with my singing lessons. He says I have a marvelous voice, and he's sweet to me, and that I don't need anybody else doing for me, or ever has done. He takes a real interest in me, and so long as he wants to come here I'm going to let him!"

Mrs. Milburn gently closed the volume of Jean Christophe, and laid it back upon the table. She clasped her hands in her lap, looking down at them, frowning and thinking hard. Presently she lifted her head, and Emmy saw her draw a long breath.

"Well, my dear," she began, with an air of having something to say that she did not want to say, "I'm going to be very honest with you. You haven't a wonderful voice. Mind, it's a good voice, and a pretty voice, but it's not big enough to be great, and it never will be great—not if it's trained for twenty years. And if that man knows anything at all about voices, Emmy, he knows he's flattering you when he says it's wonderful!"

HUSBAND SAYS WIFE IS VIOLENT; FILLS DIVORCE SUIT

Knocking him unconscious with a milk bottle, assaulting him with a lamp shade, threatening him with a gun and attempting to strangle him with a chair and a hat are acts of extreme cruelty charged by Abe Turner, Osborn, in his divorce suit from Minnie Turner, filed in Common Pleas Court.

Only his "timely action" in warding off personal harm from further personal attacks, Turner avers.

Asserting that he fears for his life, Turner seeks to enjoy life from molesting him and two children, Eugenia, 3, and Roy, 2, and also asks for the children. They were married in December, 1923 at Dayton.

The Little Yellow House

By BEATRICE BURTON -- RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSN. ©1928

"If I had money I would be one of them."

READ THIS FIRST:

The little yellow house never showed its true dinginess, because Mrs. Milburn refused to let anyone see it. Her love transformed it to a shining palace where sacrificing devotion made everything out of nothing. Emmy, the only daughter, weary of a hum drum street and Robb Hollis, the boy who lived there, and who had always loved her, excited by the attentions of the wealthy man, she worked for showered upon her, decides to rent a tiny apartment of her own, where her employer, Wells Harbison, and her friends, can see her. Wells is anxious to meet Emmy's mother, and she decides reluctantly to take him down to Flower street.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XLVI

Harbison sent her a small marble copy of the Winged Victory of Samothrace to set upon it, because, so he said, no baby grand piano was complete without one. "That," Emmy told him, with her winged smile that robbed her words of even a tiny sting, "is the only silly thing I ever heard you say. A piano isn't a table for statuary and vases. It's a delicate instrument, and shouldn't be cluttered up with things that rattle and dance while it's being played, any more than a violin should be used as a tea tray."

But she set the Winged Victory on the table between the windows, where it stood in all its proud, free beauty and was an inspiration to her while she practiced her scales and exercises. She could imagine herself standing on the edge of a concert stage as proudly as it once had stood looking out over some ancient battlefield or over some once-famous harbor filled with wooden ships.

Harbison kept sending presents to her. Flowers every day, boxes of glazed nuts and fruits, magazines, a green enamel cigarette box, a silver tea kettle with a spirit lamp under it that burned with a blue flame and gave a touch of cozy luxury to her table.

"I ought to be having Marianna and her crowd in for lunch or tea pretty soon," she kept saying to herself. But somehow or other there seemed to be very little room for anyone but Wells Harbison in her life these days. As he, himself, said, he camped upon her doorstep morning, noon, and night.

Toward the end of her first month in the flat she telephoned to ask Marianna, Cassie Sears, and Little Lovey, to come for tea, and a four-some of bridge on a Saturday afternoon. She invited them on a Tuesday, and all three of them said that they could come. On Saturday she spent a third of the contents of her pay envelope on a lace-edged cloth for the table, on chicken sandwiches and French pastry from the smartest tea room in the city, and on two new decks of cards and a bridge score.

She rushed home, dusted her little living room, borrowed a card table from the manager of the building, and was all dressed for her guests at half-past three.

But they did not come.

At five minutes after four the telephone rang, and Marianna's voice at the other end of the wire said, apologetically, that all three of them were miles away at the Pleasant Valley Country Club.

"Even if we started this minute, we couldn't get to your house in much less than an hour and a half, so there's not much use in our starting at all," she said. "We've been learning that new game of Radminton down here, and the afternoon slipped away before we realized it. Cassie and Lovey want me to tell you how sorry they are not to be able to see you, darling, and we do hope you're not disappointed. Ask us again, won't you? And better luck next time."

Emmy sighed as she hung up the receiver upon the sound of the gay, light voice. "It came to her with the force of a blow that she had no part in the lives of those three people who represented 'her own kind.' She was still an outsider, so far as they were concerned, in spite of her deliverance from Flower Street and the little yellow house. They had their own life—their bridge, their Radminton, their parties—and she had hers. And that was the beginning and the end of it."

"If I had money I would be one of them," she thought, with some bitterness, as she sat down alone to eat the little cakes and some of the sandwiches. "If I had their kind of clothes and cars and houses, things would be smooth sailing for me. But family doesn't count for much if you don't have the money to back it up, and I haven't. Now, if I were married to a man like Wells Harbison—"

She caught her breath over that thought, so daring was it.

"But I'm not," she told herself. "I'm nothing but a working woman, even if I am Marianna's cousin, and I'd better try to remember it and be sensible."

She gave herself a mental shaking and tried to forget the whole happening in an hour's hard practice. But she could not forget it. She was so hurt that her heart seemed actually to ache, in her breast. And when she finished the chicken sandwiches that night before she went to bed they were like sawdust and dead-sea fruit in her mouth. She had not realized herself, until then, how much she had counted upon that tea and upon the friendship and recognition of "her own kind of people."

One night she came home from the office, to find Mrs. Milburn waiting for her in the tiny hall at the head of the stairs. She was in her widow's weeds that had been grandmother Portland's, weeds years and years before, and she was sitting on the top step of the stairs holding her Thomas a Kempis in her black-gloved hands.

"Well, how's my big girl?" she greeted her, jumping up with that amazing lightness of hers.

She followed Emmy into the room that overlooked the park, and stood, with her little shoulders against the door, gazing around its walls. Her eyes were very wide.

In the late afternoon sunlight the place had an unmistakable air of luxury, with fresh yellow roses on the table, the tea tray with the silver kettle gleaming on it, the radio, the baby-grand piano with its Spanish shawl, the costly cigarette box and ash trays of Chinese enamel that had been gifts of Wells Harbison's from time to time.

"My goodness me, Emmy! How much do you have to pay for this place?" she asked. "It seems very elegant to me."

Feeling extremely guilty, and as if she had something to hide, Emmy told her how much rent she paid.

"I don't see how they let you have it for that much money. It's very grand," Mrs. Milburn answered her, shaking her head doubtfully.

Her eyes went to the three volumes of Wells Harbison's Jean Christophe, that lay upon the table near the bowl of yellow roses. She picked one of them up.

"What books are these?" she wanted to know. She was always interested in books. "Are they written in French, for goodness sake?"

She opened it to find out, and came upon Harbison's name written upon the fly leaf. Her mouth tightened at its tender corners.

"Do you see a great deal of this man—this Mr. Harbison, Emmy?" she asked, tapping the page with her fingers.

Emmy nodded her pretty head. "I do," she said, quietly.

The old look of anxiety and dismay came into her mother's face for a moment. "I knew it was that when you didn't come home to us for supper once or twice a week, as you promised you would."

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 12.—Now comes Fred Niblo, the director, claiming that scent will be the next sense injected into motion pictures.

He predicts that soon the motion picture audiences will smell gunpowder when the gangsters settle feuds, sage when the western hero fades out and rare perfume as the siren sets her trap.

"The achievement is entirely within the limits of practicability," Niblo says. "Odor will be synchronized with film just as sound now is attached."

"On one side of the film will be the sound track and on the other the scent track and film fans will be able to respond to pictures intended to appeal to three senses."

Getting the scents to the audience will be the greatest problem of this possible development, Niblo says. For instance, the film must be timed so that the odor of a burning refinery doesn't break out just as the hero and the sweet young thing make a final fade-out.

VERSES ON A CAT

CLUBBY! thou surely art, I ween,
A Puss of most majestic mien,
So stately all thy paces!
With such a philosophic air
Thou seek'st thy professorial chair,
And so demure thy face is!

And as thou sit'st thine eye seems fraught
With such intensity of thought.
That could we read it, knowledge
Would seem to breathe in every mew,
And learning yet undreamt by

Who dwell in Hall or College.

Oh! when in solemn tactiturnity
Thy brain seems wandering through eternity,
What happiness were mine
Could I then catch the thoughts that flow,
Thoughts such as ne'er were hatched below.

Of then, throughout the livelong
day,
With thee I'd sit and purr away
In ecstasy sublime;
And in thy face, as from a book,
I'd drink in science at each look,
Nor fear the lapse of time.

The voice fade-out is one of the newer developments of the talkies.

The object of this action is slowly to dissolve a scene in which a screen player is describing some thing to show the scene he is discussing.

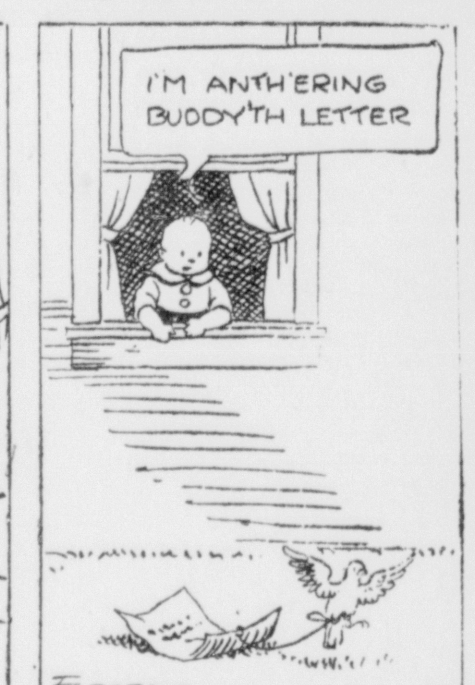

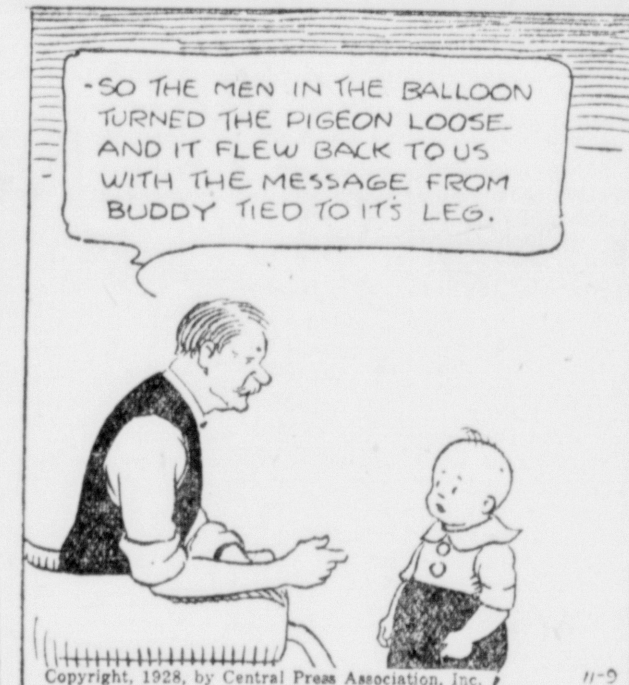

"The Leatherneck" brings to the screen Dione Ellis, press-agented as the player with the perfect classic features.

Miss Ellis is a tall slender blonde with a clear cut cameo face.

SUFFERINGS OF 5 YEARS ENDED BY NEW REMEDY

Stomach and Kidney Trouble Banished; Also Relieved Rheumatic Pains, Sprains, Stiffness

The fame of this new Konjola medicine has reached into every town, village and hamlet surrounding Xenia. Since the Konjola Man has been at the Gallaher Drug Store, 23 East Main Street, introducing and explaining this cele brated compound to the people of this whole section, every druggist in each nearby community has co-operated in furnishing this famous preparation to suffering and ailing men and women throughout this entire section. Day after day letters of gratitude from former sufferers who have been restored to health by Konjola come pouring in to the Konjola Man.

Among the latest to make a public statement about Konjola is Mrs. Bertha Thompson, R. F. D. No. 6, Xenia. Mrs. Thompson also offered her photograph for publication. Her statement reads as follows:

"To me there can be no other medicine like Konjola," said Mrs. Thompson. "It has worked such wonders in my case after everything else failed to help me that I cannot do other than feel that people in poor health should know about its exceptional merits."

"I had a complication of health troubles. It does not sound believable when I say that at one time I had a disordered stomach, weak kidneys and rheumatism that brought on all their ugly and well-known symptoms. For five years my stomach caused me intense suffering. Things I ate formed a heavy, leaden mass in the pit of my stomach. This caused belching spells that brought up a hot, sour liquid into my mouth, leaving an unpleasant taste. Gases formed and I became so short of breath that it was impossible to lie down. Palpitation of the heart was another symptom to contend with. Then my kidneys became so weak that at all hours of the night I was disturbed by bladder action. Severe headaches seemed a part of my life and to cap the climax I developed a stubborn case of rheumatism that made me feel like a solid mass of aches and pains."

"I did not know where to turn for relief and felt that I had practically reached the end of my rope. At a time when my health was in the worst possible condition I started to take Konjola and when I told of the results I obtained it will sound unbelievable but every word is the truth. It did not take a great amount of Konjola or a long time for it to accomplish all that I had tried so long and hard to obtain. Five years of stomach trouble is ended and I am eating whatever I want without suffering the least bit afterward. My kidneys have been strengthened so that I can sleep through the entire night without having to rise a single time and my rest is sound and refreshing so that I am filled with energy and vigor the next day. Konjola surely and permanently ended the headaches so that they have never returned. I am free of rheumatism and there is not an ache or pain anywhere in my body. So you see I have good reasons to praise Konjola."

The Konjola Man is at the Gallaher Drug Store, 23 East Main Street, this city, where he is meeting the public every day and introducing and explaining the merits of this medicine. —Adv.

Farm Notes

DOLLARS IN TREES

Farm woodlands will return an income to their owners, and the size of the income will depend heavily on what the owners actually know about the values of their timber. It has recently been demonstrated in two Ohio counties.

In Seneca County the owner of a farm woodland has in the past four years sold $1200 worth of hickory, basswood, sugar maple, white ash and oak from a forty-acre tract. The original timber was cut from the tract about thirty-five years ago. Since that time the woodland has also furnished enough material for a new barn on the farm, and plenty of firewood.

It now comprises second growth sugar maple, basswood, white ash, red oak, white oak and elm. If the merchantable timber from this tract were sold today, according to F. W. Dean, extension forester for the Ohio State University, it would bring in at least $4,000 and would leave a fine young start of forest growth for the next timber crop.

For many years the owner has protected the young growth in the tract, from pasturing.

In Richland County a farmer recently sold eighty-six white ash trees, on the stump, containing a volume of 26,000 board feet, for $850. Before they were sold the volume was estimated by the extension forester and the county extension agent. Before the timber was estimated, the buyer who later paid $850 for the trees, offered only $300 for them.

The community as well as the congregation of the St. John's A. M. E. Church were shocked Thursday afternoon when the news was spread announcing the passing of the Rev. W. E. Watson, pastor of the above named church. Coming to Xenia about four weeks ago from Cadiz, Ohio, the Rev. Mr. Watson had been in ill health for some time but able to do the work of his pastorate. He was the son of Norman J. and Martha H. Watson of Darbyville, O. Sept. 25, 1865. He was a member of the A. M. E. conference for some thirty years and had pastored the following churches: Delphos, Carthage, Rmley, Oxford, Lebanon, Mechanicsburg, Troy, Urbana, Lockland, Hamilton, Ironton, Portsmouth, Steubenville, Chillicothe and Cadiz. The Rev. Mr. Watson had made a favorable impression not only on the membership of St. John's A. M. E. Church in his short stay among them but of the ministers of the city as well. He leaves his wife, Mrs. Mary O. Watson, three sons, Paul of Cleveland, Everett, Cincinnati and Harley at home and one daughter, Mrs. Naomi Henry of Columbus. He also leaves two sisters, Mrs. Cora Alexander of Chicago and Mrs. Flora Hathcock of Lima and two brothers, Alexander Watson of Muncie, Ind., and David Watson, Seattle, Wash. The funeral arrangements will be announced later.

There will be a musical at the Middleburg Baptist Church Friday evening, November 9 given by the Women's Orchestra of the Mt. Zion Baptist Church, Springfield. A real treat for all who may attend. Program promptly at 8 o'clock. Rev. W. C. Allen, pastor.

Supper will be ready to serve Saturday evening promptly at 4:30 at the First A. M. E. Church.
